Additional Information Majors

Majors are advised to complete MATH 15000 (STEM)/MATH 15200 (STEM) and ECO 22100 within their first 75 credits of college work and ECO 30000 or ECO 30100 within their first 90 credits. For students already at or beyond these points...
Students must complete a minimum of 18 credits in core courses within their first 90 credits. For students already at or beyond these points when they become majors, such courses should be taken within the first 12 credits following declaration of the major. The department may waive the requirement of any of the above or other courses upon satisfactory proof of course equivalency. Credits from courses waived through substitution or examination do not count toward the major.

The following courses may not be counted toward the major: ECO 19600, ECO 29600, BUS 26100, BUS 49700.

Interdepartmental Fields

Students with majors in other departments may take courses in economics as part of an interdepartmental program of study in public policy, Latin American and Caribbean studies, environmental studies (geography), women's and gender studies and Jewish social studies. Listings in each area discuss recommended courses.

Internships

Students may receive one credit for internships in government agencies, private firms, and not-for-profit institutions. The position must provide opportunities for learning about some area of economics, accounting, or business. The course may be taken no more than twice. Credits may not be applied towards the economics or accounting major. Internships will be graded on a P/NC basis. Note that it is the responsibility of the student, not the Department, to identify internship opportunities.

Honors

Students with a 3.5 GPA in a major offered by the department and an overall 2.8 GPA at the beginning of their upper senior semester may apply for departmental honors at that time. Completion of the following and submission of an honors paper are required. Honors papers are written under faculty supervision and must be approved by a second reader as well. GPA levels must be maintained for the award of departmental honors.

- ECO 49900 - Honors Project

Economics majors may find both the minor and the Certificate Program in Public Policy Certificate of particular interest.

Additional Comments:
Students may take no more than two courses from one department or program to fulfill categories Common Core.

Transfer Students
- Transfer students who have earned an AA/AS degree from an accredited institution, including CUNY, and who matriculated in fall 2013 and after will have fulfilled the Common Core.
- For all other CUNY transfer students, any unmet Common Core requirements must be completed while matriculated at Hunter.
- Non-CUNY transfer students without an AA/AS degree should confer with their adviser to determine whether they have met CCC requirements.

2nd Degree Students
- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Degree Requirements - College Option/Hunter Focus

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Exceptions:
- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three “STEM variant” science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language
Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study
Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any “College Option” credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.

Business Studies Capstone and Internship
Department(s)
Economics
Description
The capstone experience for the Business Certificate is an internship in which students will do meaningful work and have opportunities to learn about the broader organization in order to develop an overview of the business and its challenges. The Internship seminar is designed to help students reflect on their collective experiences and gain a more global perspective on multiple businesses, their goals, and their role in helping to achieve those goals. Does not count for economics or accounting majors. Permission based on fulfillment of all other certificate course requirements and having a qualifying (96 hours or more over 15 weeks) internship or job in place.

Economics in Narrative Film
Department(s)
Economics
Description
If you ask any economist, they will insist that economics is everywhere in our lives, and it is very useful for understand how and why people do what they do. Narrative film does something similar. It focuses a microscope on our behavior and allows us to see the human condition in a new light. This course uses films from all over the world as examples of human behavior to illustrate foundational economic concepts such as tradeoffs made under scarcity. This course is intended for economics majors to better appreciate the humanistic side of their discipline and for artists and others to find a way into a powerful tool for solving social problems.

Demography and Economic Policy
Department(s)
Economics
Description
A general introduction to economic demography, addressing the following kinds of questions: What are the economic consequences of immigration to the U.S.? Will industrial nations be able to afford the health and pension costs of the aging populations? How has the size of the baby boom affected its economic well-being? Why has fertility been high in Third World countries? In industrial countries, why is marriage postponed, divorce high, fertility so low, and extramarital fertility rising? What are the economic and environmental consequences of rapid population growth?

Senior Seminar: The big (economics) picture and getting ready for life after college
Department(s)
Economics
Description
ECO 40000 is a seminar so class meetings will not be lecture-centered. Instead, each student will be expected to actively participate in class discussion, provide thoughtful comments on the readings, give polished oral presentations on their research, and offer detailed reflections on the work of their colleagues in the class. Upon completing this course, students will be able to synthesize and critically question views from some scholarly books and research articles in economics. Second, students will learn to critically examine and present ideas on an area of economics of their choice by gathering, organizing and analyzing data and writing, editing and giving oral presentations. Third, students will prepare for life after Hunter College by working on their resumes, interview skills, and public speaking.

The Department of Educational Foundations & Counseling Programs prepares students to enter the teaching and counseling professions, eventually to obtain the appropriate certification(s), which will help them establish, improve and maintain themselves within these professions.

Departmental courses are the basis of training in education and human services. The Department of Educational Foundations includes the disciplines of psychology, sociology, anthropology, history and philosophy. Research in these areas, when applied to education and counseling, provides the foundation for understanding individuals in the learning and counseling process and the social psychological context in which personal development and learning occur. In addition, the study of the history and the philosophic foundations of American education and counseling is essential for enabling future teachers and counselors to meet the ever-changing intellectual and social needs of a diverse body of individuals in a pluralistic, democratic society.

Departmental course offerings are offered in three distinct areas: psychological foundations; social foundations and counseling. All courses are anchored in theory and research-based knowledge from which we emphasize applications to the urban environment, the applied use of theory to influence policy and practice, and solutions to concrete and practical problems that school and counseling professionals experience in daily practice.

The department's preparation of teachers and counselors goes beyond the acquisition of specific skills and methods. The focus of the department is on the professional identity and development of students so that they understand and seek to influence the social, political and economic context in which they function.

English Department

Overview
The Department of English offers students a variety of courses in the study of literature, literary theory, composition, rhetoric, linguistics and creative writing. The department is interdisciplinary in its offerings, with a diverse faculty whose areas of research and approaches to teaching offer Hunter students a wide spectrum of historical, post-modern, theoretical, textual, and socio-cultural approaches to literary study, rhetoric and composition, linguistics and language, and creative writing. The department encourages disciplined, original thinking and writing while its small classes promote learning through stimulating discussions.

Introductory and intermediate courses present a wide range of literary forms, periods and genres. Students who major in English choose one of five concentrations: Literatures and Criticism; Creative Writing; English: Foundations for Adolescent Education (a concentration designed for prospective high school teachers), English Language Arts and Linguistics and Rhetoric. Qualified students may enroll in honors seminars and tutorials. The English Department participates in Hunter’s interdisciplinary programs in Asian American Studies, Comparative Literature, Women’s and Gender Studies, and Religion. The English major provides a foundation for careers in writing, teaching, journalism, publishing, law, business, or any other career that depends on the ability to read analytically and write effectively.

What can I do with my degree in English?
The ability to write well remains a rare but prized skill in almost every field, and English majors go on to careers in a variety of professions. The analytical, writing, and speaking skills honed in the major can lead graduates to careers in fields such as marketing, technology, publishing, teaching, the arts, law, venture capital, medicine, and policy making.

Students may take no more than two courses from one department or program to fulfill categories Common Core.

Transfer Students
- Transfer students who have earned an AA/AS degree from an accredited institution, including CUNY, and who matriculated in fall 2013 and after will have fulfilled the Common Core.
- For all other CUNY transfer students, any unmet Common Core requirements must be completed while matriculated at Hunter.
- Non-CUNY transfer students without an AA/AS degree should confer with their adviser to determine whether they have met CCC requirements.

2nd Degree Students
- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Degree Requirements - College Option/Hunter Focus

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language
Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.
Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

*For students who matriculated prior to fall 2019, these three credits are waived.

*For students who matriculated in fall 2019 or after, and who do not also complete a second major, minor, or certificate program, these three credits shall be from a course, at the 200-level or above, on a topic related to the language used for the Foreign Language requirement, in the target language or in English translation.

Transfer Students

All transfer students must complete the Hunter Focus. For students who first matriculated in an associate program, the number of credits required in the Hunter Focus varies with the number of credits transferred.

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any "College Option" credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.

2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements

---

Additional Comments:

Degree Requirements - Pluralism and Diversity

Type

Completion Requirement

Fulfill ALL of the following requirements:

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group A

A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America or those indigenous to the Americas.
Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group B
  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, immigrant experiences and/or intellectual traditions of one or more of the following groups in the United States of America: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans and Native Americans.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group C
  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group D
  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of Europe, including the ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Additional Comments:
Students must complete four courses designated for the Pluralism and Diversity Requirement, one from each of four categories. The four categories of Pluralism and Diversity focus on major practical or theoretical issues that emerge from, are reflected in, or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, and/or intellectual traditions of the following:

A. Non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America, or those indigenous to the Americas;
B. One or more of the following groups in the US: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, and Native Americans;
C. Women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation;
D. Europe, including ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Any one course with a Pluralism and Diversity designation can satisfy only one Pluralism and Diversity category but may also fulfill any other requirement.

Transfer Students
Transfer students must take at least two courses designated for different categories of the Pluralism and Diversity requirement. The number of courses required in Pluralism and Diversity is determined by the number of credits transferred.

<table>

D. Electives (15 credits)

Students in this major are required to take fifteen credits of elective courses. One elective course must be a 400-level advanced seminar, which can only be taken after achieving 24 credits in the major (see below). The remaining courses must be at the 300-level or above (with the exception of ENGL 28000 and ENGL 28500).

All English majors also have the option to take one of their elective courses in another department. In order to do this, students must meet all of that department’s prerequisites for the course. Students with double majors may apply the course to one of those majors, but not both. For example, someone majoring in English and History who takes HIST 34251 Britain Since 1689 may count that course toward either the English or History major, not both. Students may choose from the courses and departments listed below.

Note: To take a 300-level course in one of the following departments and programs that is not on the list, or in another department, students must have prior written permission from an English advisor and must meet all the prerequisites for the course.

E. 400-level Advanced Seminar

Complete ALL of the following Courses:

- ENGL49000 - Advanced Seminar in Literature and Criticism

All English majors must take a 400-level Advanced Seminar as one of their electives. In order to be eligible for the course, students must first complete at least 24 credits in the major and meet the prerequisites for the specific Seminar (listed below).
Prerequisites: ENGL 22000; ENGL 25200; ENGL 30400; ENGL 30600; ENGL 30700; one of ENGL 31700, 31800, 32000, 32100, 32300, 32400, 32500, 32600, 32700, or 32900)

Complete ALL of the following Courses:
- ENGL48400 - Special Studies Seminar

  (Prerequisites: ENGL 22000; ENGL 25200; ENGL 28500; ENGL 30400; ENGL 30700; and both a level 1 and 2 workshop in the student's chosen genre)

- Students may take any Advanced Seminar for which they meet the prerequisites. If eligible, students may take the Honors Seminar (ENGL 49400) in place of or in addition to one of the Advanced Seminars. In rare cases, students may take ENGL 48500 Individual Tutorial Project instead of an Advanced Seminar, but only by permission of an advisor and the professor supervising the project.

Major Requirements - English: Foundations for Adolescent Education Concentration

Type Completion Requirement

The Concentration in English: Foundations For Adolescent Education (42 cr.) is designed to give students the foundation in literary studies, writing, and linguistics that is required for teaching English in grades 7-12. This concentration alone does not meet the teaching certification requirements for New York State and New York City public schools. Students interested in meeting these certification requirements will take this course sequence as part of the BA program in Adolescent English, Grades 7-12 jointly offered by the School of Arts & Sciences and the School of Education. Students interested in the BA program in Adolescent English, Grades 7-12 should declare this concentration of the major in English before declaring the joint major with the School of Education. Students who do not wish to pursue certification do not need to contact the School of Education and should simply follow the course of study set out in this English concentration.

Introduction to Creative Writing

Department(s)

English

Description

This multi-genre workshop is an introduction to creative writing and will focus on poetry, fiction, and creative non-fiction. Course work will include both reading and writing in these three genres, writing exercises, and, as students will present copies of their work to the class for discussion, an introduction to workshop methods of critiquing student poems. Weekly reading and writing assignments will introduce students to literary terms, poetic devices and narrative strategies. The emphasis will be on revision and writing as a process. Work includes Reading Response Journal and portfolio of work done in these three genres.

Queer Voices
Department(s)
English
Description
In this introductory course, we will explore what makes a piece of literature "queer" by looking at a range of LGBTQ perspectives in fiction, memoir, drama, and poetry. We will also consider the historic and cultural influences that contributed to the literature and the work's literary and social impact.

The course will explore the bending, folding, and twisting incoherencies of desire, from the psychoanalytic mappings of Freud (Three Essays on the Theory of Sexuality) and Klein (Love, Hate, and Reparation) to the reappraisals of Deleuze and Guattari (Anti-Oedipus), and Foucault. Moving away from the normal and the universal toward what Lauren Berlant calls "more expansive and generous sociabilities and worlds," we will engage a set of Bohemian New York writers, potentially including Poe, Winthrop (Cecil Dreeme), Whitman, Barnes, Henri-Ford and Tyler, Ginsberg, and Delany.

Course Title
Shakespeare's New Worlds

Department(s)
English

Description
Shakespeare's career (c. 1590-1613) overlapped with what has been characterized as the 'age of discovery', when English explorers and merchants came into contact with alien spaces and foreign peoples, and began working out ways to describe and categorize them, trade with them, and dispossess them. Knowledge about places far beyond Europe was becoming ever more commonplace in London, and Shakespeare's contemporaries were beginning to imagine themselves as global players. This course asks how Shakespeare's drama staged these alien spaces and foreign peoples for his audiences. We will read The Comedy of Errors, The Merchant of Venice, Titus Andronicus, Othello, Antony and Cleopatra, The Tempest, and The Winter's Tale.

Victorian Cosmopolitanism
Department(s)
English
Description
Cosmopolitanism is often used today to describe an ethical commitment to world citizenship or a position of mobility and privilege (or both). This course examines the way cosmopolitanism emerged as a discourse in nineteenth-century Britain and the way it can be used to describe the formal and thematic concerns of Victorian writers. At a time when the advent of railways, steamships and telegraphs and the growth of the British Empire were making Britain seem inseparable from a wider world, writers grappled with questions such as: should local or universal concerns dominate? What does it mean to be British and part of a vast empire? Is the city a reflection of the world or of the nation? We will examine how these questions shaped and were shaped by poetry, novels, non-fiction writing and visual culture.

Course Title
British Novel and Decolonization
Department(s)
English
Description
'This course examines twentieth-century British and post-colonial literature and culture in the context of war, decolonization and immigration. Drawing upon primary texts as well as readings from critical and postcolonial theory, we will examine the ways in which writers responded to the traumatic historical events and national transformations of the twentieth century.'

Twentieth Century Poetry and Poetics

Description
This course will explore British, Irish and American poetry of the twentieth century, with an emphasis on the modernist movement, in which poets attempted to “make new” both the technical elements of poetry (metrical and syntactical rhythm, sound and rhyme, line and stanza organization) and its subject matter. Topics to be discussed include poetry’s approach to mass (or popular) culture, its exploration of the idea of the object, its connections to performance and recitation, and, above all, its fascination with history and temporality. In taking account of the vast transformations of the period—two world wars, rapid urbanization, nascent decolonization movements, ever-increasing commodification—we will also necessarily attend to the shifting geographies of modernism. We will address modernist poetry’s deliberate difficulty, perceived elitism and failure to engage with material social relations (or outright reactionary seeming politics). At the end of the course we will also explore some poetry from the later twentieth century, associated with L'A'N'G'U'G'E poetry and its aftermath. Works to be explored include those of Yeats, Eliot, Pound, Lewis, Williams, Stevens, Cummings, HD, Stein, Moore, Hughes, Zukovsky, Oppen, Auden, Ashbery, Bernstein, Armantrout and others. We will read not only poems, but poetic statements and criticism written both by poets and critics based in universities.

Course Title
Romantic Novel
Department(s)
English
Description
In Britain, the years 1780 to 1833 witnessed the blossoming of Romanticism in poetry and expository prose, and historically the works that are seen as most embodying the literary movement are taken usually from these two genres. However, the Romantic Period was also significant in the continuing development of the novel, with the advancement or emergence of notable sub-genres such as gothic novels (of Radcliffe, Lewis and others), Jacobin novels (of Godwin, Wollstonecraft and others), satirical novels (of Peacock and Hogg), historical novels (of Scott), orientalist fiction (of Beckford), and quasi-science fiction (of Mary Shelley). What connection, if any, do any of the important novels of the period, and the genres they represent, have with traditional Romanticism? One central focus of the course will be an attempt to answer this question, and to help with this, a small sampling of poetry and expository prose works will attend our readings of the novels. A concurrent emphasis of the course will be to consider these novels in all their individual complexity -- beyond their possible connections with Romantic texts of other genres -- in order to give a fuller picture of the era’s myriad and conflicting concerns. In this way, the novels in this course will be studied for the ways they speak to the various social, political, and philosophical contexts out of which they sprang, in keeping with Richard Maxwell’s understanding of the novel as ‘a form deeply open to politics and history’. One or more novel by each the following authors will likely be considered: Jane Austen, William Beckford, Maria Edgeworth, William Godwin, James Hogg, Matthew Lewis, Charles Maturin, Thomas Love Peacock, Ann Radcliffe, Walter Scott, Mary Shelley, and Mary Wollstonecraft. Critical essays on individual works, the novel genre during the Romantic period, and the novel genre generally will be studied as well.

Chaucer
Department(s)
English
Description
This course is an exploration of Chaucer’s Canterbury Tales and a pilgrimage of sorts in its own right considered the greatest medieval English poem by the greatest medieval English poet. Particular attention will be paid to the cultural, social, political, and religious contexts of the poem, to Middle English as a literary language, and to the use of new media in the exploration of old texts.

Film and Media Studies Department

Overview

The Hunter College Department of Film and Media Studies offers two undergraduate degree programs in the production and critical analysis of film and media. One program leads toward a major in Film, combining film history and theory with film production. The other leads toward a major in Media Studies, combining critical media analysis with creative practice using a mix of contemporary media forms (video, animation, digital imaging and graphics, web and interactive production). Our curriculum is founded on the integration of theory and practice. Leading scholars in history, aesthetics, media policy, critical theory and alternative and international practices provide students with a broad base in analytical thinking. Courses deal with subjects such as the history and aesthetics of film, video, television and new media, genre studies; the history, production and distribution of print and broadcast news; media representations of race, class and gender; and the intricate relationships among the mass media, popular culture and society. The department’s production courses encourage students to work creatively in a variety of existing and emerging media forms. Courses include narrative film production (including screenwriting and directing), documentary production, television production, journalism and emerging media (including web design, animation, physical computing and game programming). The department is distinguished by award-winning faculty who are active in their respective fields.

What can I do with my degree in Film and Media Studies?

Skills honed in the major include research and communication skills, critical thinking, project management, and a diverse array of media production from digital imaging to video and television production to web and interactive production. In addition to careers within the film and media industries, graduates are attractive to the publishing industry, advertising, web production, tech startups, animation, game production and communications fields as well as other related industries.

Hunter Core Requirement

Several courses within this major may fulfill parts of the Hunter Core Requirement (CUNY Common Core Requirement [CCCR], Concurrent Requirements). When selecting courses, it may be to a student’s advantage to choose courses that count toward the Hunter Core Requirement and also advance the student on the path to the major.

In the case of the Film major, the course that meets CCCR is:

Degree Requirements - College Option/Hunter Focus

Type: Completion Requirement

- Earn at least 12 credits

The Hunter Focus consists of 12 credits total. The composition of these credits will vary depending on the student’s matriculation status and language proficiency. All students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement; after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study.

Exceptions:

- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three “STEM variant” science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any “College Option” credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.

2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.
2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Additional Comments:

Degree Requirements - Pluralism and Diversity

Type: Completion Requirement

Fulfill ALL of the following requirements:

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group A
    A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America or those indigenous to the Americas.

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group B
    A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, immigrant experiences and/or intellectual traditions of one or more of the following groups in the United States of America: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans and Native Americans.

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group C
    A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation.

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group D
    A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of Europe, including the ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Additional Comments:

Students must complete four courses designated for the Pluralism and Diversity Requirement, one from each of four categories. The four categories of Pluralism and Diversity focus on major practical or theoretical issues that emerge from, are reflected in, or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, and/or intellectual traditions of the following:

A. Non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America, or those indigenous to the Americas;
B. One or more of the following groups in the US: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, and Native Americans;
C. Women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation;
D. Europe, including ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Any one course with a Pluralism and Diversity designation can only satisfy one Pluralism and Diversity category but may also fulfill any other requirement.

Transfer Students

Transfer students must take at least two courses designated for different categories of the Pluralism and Diversity requirement. The number of courses required in Pluralism and Diversity is determined by the number of credits transferred.

The major must be declared in with an undergraduate media studies adviser. (see department website for adviser schedules http://fm.hunter.cuny.edu/).

Students will be able to do a Media Studies BA: General Media Studies Major but may choose one of the concentrations in the major. These concentrations are:
- Media Studies BA: Concentration in Media Analysis and Criticism
- Media Studies BA: Concentration in Documentary and Television Production
- Media Studies BA: Concentration in Journalism
- Media Studies BA: Concentration in Emerging Media

However, these concentrations are optional; as long as they satisfy the General Media Studies Major requirements, students may combine courses from different concentrations. Students majoring in Media Studies must take the following introductory courses. These courses count toward the major.
- MEDIA 18000
- FILMP 15000/MEPD 15000
- FILMP 16000/MEPD 16000

A maximum of 6 credits in FILM or FILMP courses at the 200- or 300-level may be applied toward the major in Media Studies. Students must meet any prerequisites for these courses. Courses in Independent Study, Honors Project, and Internship do not count toward the major. Students must consult a program adviser to plan choice and sequence of courses.

Double Majors

Students may choose to complete a major in the Department of Film and Media
Students may choose to complete a major in the Department of Film and Media Studies and a second major in another department. A student cannot declare a double major in Film and Media Studies. Because of the intensive nature of the production courses in both Film and Media Studies, it is strongly recommended that all students take no more than two production courses per semester.

Honors

To qualify for departmental honors in Film or Media Studies, a student must have a 3.5 grade point average in major courses and a 3.0 grade point average overall. The student must also either complete an Honors Project FILM 40200 or MEDIA 40200, approved by the Department Policy and Curriculum Committee, with a grade of A; or a 400-level production or analytical seminar course with a grade of A. See the department for more information.

Academic Institution: Hunter College

Course Title: Compar Std Ee Cinema: Polish, Czech, Russ., So. Slavic. Discuss Cultural, Politcl., Historic Aspects

Department(s): Film and Media Studies

Description:
The course is a comparative study of cultural, political, and historical aspects of Russian, Polish, Czechoslovakian, Romanian, and East German cinema as a visual art form. The course examines samples of East European cinema addressing a respective country's history and social conditions starting with World War II time and covering both the Communist era and post-Communist period. By the end of the course, students will acquire critical tools to provide an informed verbal and written analysis of East European films as cultural texts.

Experimental Production

Department(s)
- Film and Media Studies

Description
Experimental methods of film and video production, emphasizing innovative and nontraditional formal and conceptual practice. This is a production course in which students will explore various experimental methods of film and video practice, including: the use of found footage; camera-less filmmaking; image processing; multiple projection and projection on non-standard surfaces; alternatives to continuity editing; and time duration in experimental media. Through extensive practical exercises, specific assignments, and brief weekly screenings, students will examine the various strands of experimental film and video practice and produce film and video work in response.

Understanding New Media
Department(s)
Film and Media Studies
Description
This analytical course explores the convergence of media, communications technologies, art design, and culture. This course is intended to familiarize students with important approaches in new media, focusing on the history of the computer as a medium and the conceptual history of interactivity in art and communication. Artists are at the forefront of technological revolutions. Whether designing computer games, producing web sites, writing software, or working on intelligent systems, artists work on a daily basis consuming and producing electronic cultural artifacts. Cybertechnologies have created new contexts for understanding culture. Referring to popular media, science fiction, computer games, and artists’s projects, well explore how technology has been and will continue to be a key component of culture.

Women and Media
Department(s)
Women and Media
Film and Media Studies
Description
This course explores how our understanding of the category “women” depends, in large part, on cultural mediation. After an introduction of key approaches to studying gender, this course will examine how various forms of media have reconfigured our understanding of women as subjects of representation over time.

Motion Graphics
Department(s)
Film and Media Studies
Description
This course provides a practical introduction to the creative possibilities of producing computer-generated motion graphics. Temporal development is the core of many digital arts, which include video, digital animation, music, web-casting and new media performance. This course explores the theory and application of motion graphics that are created, processed, and then re-presented in time. Through hands-on, creative projects, students learn After Effects and develop production and workflow strategies for digital time-based media, like audio clips, movie clips and animations to reach an understanding of the key characteristics of time-based digital arts. Assigned projects will cover topics such as storyboarding, pre-production, digital data collection, fundamental theories of choreography (sound and image co-ordination), image manipulation and output formats. Projects will require in and out of class time. The practical research assignments are supported by lectures, screenings, and discussions about examples of time-based art.

Web Design Projects
Department(s)
Film and Media Studies
Description
This project-based class is designed to give students the experience of solving practical problems in web production and to add to the advanced student’s web design portfolio with a comprehensive project. Students will work independently and in teams on a large-scale collaborative project. Students will learn the entire process of web interface design from project idea to completion. They will learn to collaborate in design teams, present work-in-progress, perform user testing, and meet deadlines. Projects are designed for non-commercial, in-house (CUNY) or other non-for-profit organizations. Using the cycle of design, implementation, and user testing and revision, students will learn how to design a successful website.

Overview
Academic Institution: Hunter College
Course Title: Game Programming I
Department(s): Film and Media Studies
Description: This course serves as an introduction to game design in the Unity 3D game engine. It will also serve as an introduction to programming in C#. 2D Games will be created using sprites made in Photoshop or another image editor. 3D games will use assets created in Maya, an alternate 3D modeling tool, or basic geometry. The course will cover game design principles with a strong emphasis on learning the cycle of prototyping, playtesting, iterative design and publishing. The end goal will be to create a portfolio-ready final piece. Library research is not expected for this course. This course is focusing on the procedural thinking, aesthetic expression and critical thinking needed for game programming, therefore it will not require extensive written papers.

Experimental Production
Department(s)
Film and Media Studies
Description
Experimental methods of film and video production, emphasizing innovative and nontraditional formal and conceptual practice. This is a production course in which students will explore various experimental methods of film and video practice, including: the use of found footage, camera-less filmmaking, image processing, multiple projection and projection on non-standard surfaces, alternatives to continuity editing, and time duration in experimental media. Through extensive practical exercises, specific assignments, and brief weekly screenings, students will examine the various strands of experimental film and video practice and produce film and video work in response.

Hunter College

Geography & Environmental Science Department

Overview
The department offers majors in Geography and Environmental Studies, a five-year combined BA/MA program in Environmental Studies and Adolescent Education-Earth Science, and minors in Geography, Environmental Studies and Geology. Our programs focus on urban and social geography; globalization and international development; earth systems, environmental science, and physical geography; geographic information science, remote sensing and digital mapping, environmental policy and sustainability; and social studies and environmental education. In addition, students learn how to use advanced analytical skills, including quantitative, qualitative, modeling, and geospatial research methods in order to address the vital problems humanity is facing today. In addition to comprehensive classroom instruction, the department offers field trips and field courses in geography and environmental science.

A major in Geography is designed to prepare students to understand our world's changing social and natural environments in their interaction and using concepts of place, space, distance, and location. In many instances, geographers make maps to analyze differences between places and to seek explanations for those differences. Most importantly, Geography not only will broaden your knowledge of the world and how human and natural systems interact but will also equip you with the skills needed to seek solutions to many pressing problems, from the impacts and consequences of climate change, depletion of natural resources, and pollution to poverty, inequality, geopolitical crises, migration, and insecurity. These skills include critical thinking, spatial analysis, and analytical writing. In addition to classroom learning and field trips, students learn by doing research projects together with community advocacy groups in New York City.

Geography majors are encouraged to pursue the course of study that best fits their interests while also exploring the three concentration areas that the department offers: Cities and Globalization; Digital Mapping and Geographic Information Science; and Sustainability. There is an option that prepares students for temporary certification in New York State to teach social studies at grades K-12.

The Environmental Science major offers a common core of courses and an interdisciplinary approach that allows students to focus on environmental policy and management or earth systems science. Our major prepares students to identify and describe the components of Earth's environment and their interconnections. Our goal is to equip students with theoretical and practical tools to synthesize the body of knowledge presented in the course work and to address real world problems. We seek to accomplish this goal by fostering classroom dynamics where assumptions, methods and findings are critically evaluated. After choosing a concentration, students take advanced physical science courses for the Environmental Earth Science concentration and human geography and social science courses for the Environmental Management Policy concentration. Coursework covers subjects that include weather and climate, climate change, environmental hazards, fluid dynamics, sustainability, ecology, oceanography, conservation, urban problems and their solutions and the global impact of humans on the Earth system.

What can I do with my degree in Geography and Environmental Studies?
Courses in all of these fields are valuable parts of a general liberal education, developing an awareness of earth phenomena and the role these play in people's lives. In addition, through integration of content knowledge, applied skills, and internships, our graduates are prepared for both graduate study and immediate employment in the public, private, and non-profit sectors.

Our website features stories about our former students who equally excel in academic and professional worlds. Courses for Geography and Environmental Studies majors are valuable parts of a liberal arts education, developing an awareness of how earth systems work and the role these play in people's lives. They also educate students about the challenges humanity faces in the era of global climate change, geopolitical and public health crises, growing inequality, and migration. Both majors prepare students for graduate degrees in earth and environmental science, geography, geoinformatics, and related fields. Many students successfully pursue top graduate programs and receive prestigious internships and fellowships such as those from the National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR) and the National Atmospheric and Space Administration (NASA). U. S. Environmental Protection Agency and Department of Environmental Protection. Many also become professionals whose expertise in the above areas is widely used by the governments and administrations of New York City and New York State, the U.S. Bureau of the Census, and private industry; they also develop careers as geography/earth science teachers.

Teacher Education Pathway
Students planning to teach this subject in grades 7-12 should look at the School of Education: Program List for information about their programs that lead to the recommendation for New York State Initial Certification required to be a lead teacher in NYS public schools.

| Earn at least 12 credits | The Hunter Focus consists of 12 credits total. The composition of these credits will vary depending on the student’s matriculation status and language proficiency. All students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement; after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study. Exceptions:
- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three “STEM variant” science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language
Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study
Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

World Regions in Global Context
Department(s)
Geography and Environmental Science
Description
This course draws on and explores the concept of the geographic region as a way to organize and understand our fast-changing and interconnected world. Geographic concepts (e.g., space, place, distance, scale, borders, and regions) are used to study environmental, economic, social, and political conditions and identify key concerns in the culturally diverse world. The course will examine geographic world regions (e.g., South America, Europe, the Middle East, Sub-Saharan Africa, and others), connections in and between these regions, and how these regions and their populations interact as parts of a global system. For each world region, you will learn major historical events, specific interactions between natural environment and social systems, and their potential for and challenges to sustainable development.

Environmental Conservation: Urban Problems

Course Title: Environmental Conservation: Urban Problems
Department(s): Geography and Environmental Science
Description: Covers topics related to environmental problems and their connection to urban areas. The course will begin with a survey of urban systems (transport, water, food, waste and energy) followed by investigating how these systems contribute to environmental problems and their solutions. This investigation will also include a discussion about the connections between rural and urban areas and urban planning that attempts to minimize environmental hazards.

Pacific Islands
Department(s)
Geography and Environmental Science
Description
The islands of Polynesia, Micronesia, and Melanesia are among the smallest countries and territories in the world and extend across the world’s largest ocean. Despite size and geographic isolation, this region has a strong legacy of migration, cultural diffusion, and regional integration. Through this course, you will gain an understanding of the relationship between the islands and the ocean in terms of physical and human geographies, the cultural ecologies of these islands, and their relationships with each other across the region. The course will also discuss issues of pre-contact, colonial, and post-colonial identities and sovereignty, and contemporary integration into the global community of nations.

Department(s)
Geography and Environmental Science
Description
This course examines the Middle East and North Africa under a new light that highlights the region as a rich cultural landscape that has influenced the rest of the world with their cultural, political, ideological, and scientific achievements. From the first Sumerians settled on Mesopotamia to the convulsive movements of the Arab Spring that are shaking the foundations of some Middle East and North African nation-states through the Egyptian civilization and the Persian and Ottoman empires, the Middle East and North African region (MENA) represents one of the longest and vital developments in human civilization

Afghanistan

Geography and Environmental Science

Description

The course will be an examination of the geography, ethnography, and culture of Afghanistan, one of the most diverse countries in the world, with influences both internal and from as far abroad as Greece, India, and Mongolia. It will take a historical geography perspective on the creation and existence of the Afghan state, the world as seen by the peoples of Afghanistan and how this affects their interaction with others. The course is specifically NOT intended to discuss current international events concerning the country, except as it directly interplays with the Afghan peoples and their cultures.

History of Geography

Department(s)

Geography and Environmental Science

Description

This course traces the history of American geography and its direct antecedents back to the time of ancient Greece. The goal is to acquire understanding of the major people, events, innovations, ideas, theories and models that have marked the upward trajectory of the field of geography from its ancient origins to a modern discipline.

Globalization and Uneven Development

Department(s)

Geography and Environmental Science

Description

This course will explore the overlapping and contested worlds of two broad themes: globalization and uneven development. We will begin with a historical look at the emergence of colonialism and the production of the world into largely still-existing spheres of rich and poor. From here we will survey the history of thought on the question(s) of development, poverty reduction and economic growth. We will then move to address the historical and present-day development industry, and critiques thereof, along with newer poverty reduction strategies such as microfinance and alternative grassroots development schemes. We will explore these emergences in the context of broader, global economic trends, as well as in the context of state, multi-state and non-state actors.

Course Title
Geography of Public Space
Department(s)
Geography and Environmental Science
Description
In this course, we will explore what it means for space to be public particularly in the urban environment. We will consider the economic, social, political and cultural ideas in the idea of being 'public,' and the ways these are played out spatially. We will consider who counts as a member of 'the public' in different times and places, the idea of multiple publics, and counter-publics, and how these various groups interact in the contests over public space. We will explore the city on foot both during class time and in independent assignments.

Geography of Housing
Department(s)
Geography and Environmental Science
Description
This course will draw from a range of academic and popular sources in order to give students a strong foundational understanding of the geographic, social, and economic realities of housing in the United States. We will critically examine the geography of housing development as it has varied in time and place. We will query the popular ambivalence towards renting, the normative ideology of ownership, and look at the community-based attempts to rethink and reconstruct residential property relations. We will investigate major local, state, and federal housing laws and policies of the past century. We will demystify the relationship between the US housing market and the global economy. Based on what we learn through these lines of inquiry we will take up and grapple with the key issues in housing today: gentrification, uneven development, local housing shortages, the affordable housing crisis and the foreclosure crisis.

Very Big Cities
Department(s)
Geography and Environmental Science
Description
This course will review the literature on models of cities for their adequacy/inadequacy in explaining spatial patterns, growth and change in the very large cities of the world. Students will select a metropolitan area from among the world’s 20 largest and open lines of communications with experts and their peers in these cities as well as search for existing literature. We will compare these cities to NYC around such topics as response to topography, transportation, evolution of the CBD, in-migration, intra-urban migration, ethnicity and various planning initiatives.

Introduction to Oceanography
Department(s)
Geography and Environmental Science
Description
This course will offer an introduction to the subject of oceanography. We will discuss the physical, chemical, biological and geological aspects of the oceans learn about the structure and motion of the atmosphere and how they all influence ocean circulation and we will learn about waves, tides and tsunamis, the carbon cycle and how the ocean influences the Earth's climate system. In addition to providing a good introduction to aspects of the scientific world, it is a foundational course for Environmental Studies, Geography and BA/MA Earth Science Education majors.

Introduction to Remote Sensing

Department(s)

Geography and Environmental Science

Description

Introduces remote sensing image interpretation and a basic understanding of the use of remote sensing technology in the study of environmental issues and the monitoring of Earth systems. The first half of the course focuses on aerial photography, photogrammetry and image interpretation. The second half focuses on the use of remote sensing in Earth system sciences. Extensive lab exercises include practical assignments and computer-based analysis of remote sensing images. Students will learn basic image interpretation and some web-based image processing skills through various lab exercises.

Spatial Data Science 1

This practical hands-on course will introduce you to some of the main programming concepts and techniques relevant to computational methods of Spatial Data Science. The course starts with the basics of algorithms, and works through examples of reading and writing pseudocode for some general, mathematical, and spatial operations. We will then dive into the nuts and bolts of Python as a first language and learn how to translate some basic operations into running code, in the context of representing and processing geospatial data. The class will also review some of the most commonly-used open- and closed-source Python libraries for spatial programming.

Field Topographic Surveying

Field use of surveying equipment. Notebook and computer data collection relating to horizontal and vertical location on the landscape, including the use of global positioning systems. Field record-keeping and preliminary analysis of results.

Field Techniques in Geography

Observation and analysis of physical geography, biogeography and geomorphology of selected areas. Field geographic techniques such as ground-truthing of remotely sensed images, the use of maps, compasses, and GPS to navigate.

Introduction to Weather, Climate and Climate Change
Department(s)
Geography and Environmental Science
Description
Offers a basic understanding of how weather systems form, why certain regions have particular types of weather patterns, and what is known about climatic fluctuations across the globe. This includes an understanding of the basic physical principals that determine: how hot or cold a particular location is; how seasonal cycles vary in different parts of the world; and the types and amounts of precipitation. Students learn to analyze several types of weather maps and acquire a basic understanding of central issues related to global climate change, one of the most significant environmental issues of our time.

Introduction to Weather, Climate and Climate Change Laboratory
Department(s)
Geography and Environmental Science
Description
This is a hands-on laboratory science course. Will explain how weather and climate affect people and the natural environment through hands-on laboratory and field experiences. The course explores the science of the atmosphere starting with weather and weather forecasting including severe storms such as hurricanes and tornadoes. World climates and global climate change is included. This course will serve as an introduction to atmospheric science and will prepare students for further work in geography and Earth sciences.

Earth Systems Science 1
Department(s)
Geography and Environmental Science
Description
In this course students learn to think of Earth as a system of several components that interact with each other, sometimes in very complicated ways. The components of the Earth system that will be considered include the atmosphere, the hydrosphere, the lithosphere, and the biosphere. While each of these components can, and should, be studied in more detail in separate courses, here the focus is on interactions between them.

Introduction to GIS for Social Science Research
Department(s)
Geography and Environmental Science
Description
This course will introduce students to GIS through the use of a number of exercises. The end product will be a map of New York City (parts of the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx) food access by a number of different socio-economic features. In the process of producing these maps, students will learn the basics of ArcGIS 10.0, so as to be able to handle vector data (single features and categories of features), create maps, analyze geographic patterns and create density surfaces and charts from the spatial distribution of the data (all data are provided); perform spatial analysis.

Fossil Fuels
Department(s)
Geography and Environmental Science
Description
The course will search historical information about the uses of coal, oil and gas in different geographic areas during human history. Then we'll present chemical and physical properties along with the classification of fossil fuels. Students will learn about the origin and hypothesis of formation and evolution of fossil fuel deposits in the context of plate tectonics during geologic time. This will give you a better understanding of the global distribution of 'black gold.' In the second part of the course students will learn basic information about exploration, exploitation, and recent environmental consequences of major coal, oil and gas deposit exploitation.

German Department

Overview
The mission of the German Department is to teach German language, culture, and civilization in a professional, research-based manner, to help students develop a foundational knowledge of the German cultural and literary canon, to develop intercultural awareness and foster understanding between the Hunter as well as New York City communities and the German-speaking countries, and to create and propagate knowledge and understanding about German language, literature and culture and also about the teaching of German language, literature and culture locally, regionally, and nationally. The department offers courses in the language, literature, and culture of German-speaking countries that are designed and sequenced to guide students from their current language proficiency levels through well-defined stages of proficiency in production and comprehension so that students will reach college-level literacy in German and excel in the field of German studies. Students who complete the elementary and intermediate courses can expect to reach the ability to function in everyday situations in German-speaking environments and to have a solid base for the upper-level study of German language, literature and culture. Students who complete advanced language, literature, and culture courses will gain an understanding and appreciation of German culture and civilization, past and present; they will comprehend spoken and written German to the level of understanding the classics of German prose, drama, and poetry; and will either have reached or will be well on their way towards reaching the linguistic and cultural capacity for engaging in intellectual discourse in written and spoken German.

What can I do with my degree in German?
Germany is the third-largest economy in the world, and German is the first language of over 95 million people worldwide. Students with a foundation in the language, literature, history, and intellectual revolutions of Germany are prepared to enter a wide variety of vocations. Majors continue to postgraduate study in Germany and the United States, enter law schools and other graduate programs and work in fields as diverse as environmental policy, journalism, arts management, consulting, and engineering, as well as in governmental and nongovernmental organizations and businesses. Some of our recent graduates have been hired by the Manhattan branches of the Goethe Institute and the German American Chamber of Commerce.

Foreign Language Requirement
Students who begin German as a new language will fulfill the foreign language requirement by taking 12 credits in the elementary/intermediate language sequence: GERMN 10100-GERMN 10200 (or GERMN 10300), GERMN 20100-GERMN 20200 (or GERMN 20300). Students who enter with one or more years of high school German must take all the credits they need so that they can pass GERMN 20200 (or GERMN 20300). Students who enter with four years of high school German will be exempted from the foreign language requirement (see the General Education - Effective Fall 2019 section of this catalog).

Placement
Students who have some knowledge of German should consult with one of the departmental advisers or the chair for placement in a class that is appropriate for them.

Students who begin their study of German in college may count 6 credits of Intermediate German instruction toward the minor and will need to take two courses at the 300-level.

12 credits in language and literature taught in German at the 300-level or higher are required for the minor.

- Courses in the range of GERMN 30100 - Advanced German Comprehension and Conversation through GERMN 35900 German Literary Seminar.
- Courses in the range of GERMN 38500 - Advanced Topics in German Language Study through GERMN 44400 Seminar Studies in German Literature and Language.

Additional Comments:
- Note: At least 3 of the credits for a German minor must be earned by taking a literature class numbered between GERMN 32000 and GERMN 35900.

Students who begin their study of German in college may count 6 credits of Intermediate German instruction toward the minor and will need to take two courses at the 300-level.
Earn at least 12 credits

The Hunter Focus consists of 12 credits total. The composition of these credits will vary depending on the student’s matriculation status and language proficiency. All students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement; after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study.

Exceptions:
- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three “STEM variant” science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0–12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

*For students who matriculated prior to fall 2019, these three credits are waived.

*For students who matriculated in fall 2019 or after, and who do not also complete a second major, minor, or certificate program, these three credits shall be from a course, at the 200-level or above, on a topic related to the language used for the Foreign Language requirement, in the target language or in English translation.

Transfer Students

All transfer students must complete the Hunter Focus. For students who first matriculated in an associate program, the number of credits required in the Hunter Focus varies with the number of credits transferred.

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any “College Option” credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.
Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Additional Comments:

Degree Requirements - Pluralism and Diversity
Type: Completion Requirement

Fulfill ALL of the following requirements:

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group A
  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America or those indigenous to the Americas.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group B
  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, immigrant experiences and/or intellectual traditions of one or more of the following groups in the United States of America: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans and Native Americans.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group C
  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group D
  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of Europe, including the ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Additional Comments:
Students must complete four courses designated for the Pluralism and Diversity Requirement, one from each of four categories. The four categories of Pluralism and Diversity focus on major practical or theoretical issues that emerge from, are reflected in, or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, and/or intellectual traditions of the following:
A. Non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America, or those indigenous to the Americas;
B. One or more of the following groups in the US: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, and Native Americans;
C. Women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation;
D. Europe, including ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.
Any one course with a Pluralism and Diversity designation can satisfy only one Pluralism and Diversity category but may also fulfill any other requirement.

Transfer Students
Transfer students must take at least two courses designated for different categories of the Pluralism and Diversity requirement. The number of courses required in Pluralism and Diversity is determined by the number of credits transferred:

History Department

Overview
History is the record of human experience. Its study is a first step in learning about ourselves and our society — about economics and politics, psychology and sociology, mathematics and science, the arts and the humanities. Beyond the purely practical consideration of a profession, the study of history is exciting in its own right. The History Department offers courses in the history of the United States, the ancient world, medieval and modern Europe, Russia, Jewish studies, the Middle East and Islamic world, Latin America, Africa, East Asia and South Asia, as well as many comparative topics in political, intellectual, and world history.

What can I do with my degree in History?
For students whose undergraduate major is history, career opportunities are numerous and varied. Medical, law and other professional schools favor applicants with history majors because of their broad background and research skills. Moreover, while teaching has long been a popular goal for history majors, positions in government (local, state and national), publishing, museums, public relations, advertising, media/communications, business and management also await those students whose human perspective, critical thinking skills, and intellectual discipline have been developed in history classes.

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Earn at least 12 credits</td>
<td>The Hunter Focus consists of 12 credits total. The composition of these credits will vary depending on the student’s matriculation status and language proficiency. All students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement; after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Exceptions:
- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three “STEM variant” science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language
Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study
Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

*For students who matriculated prior to fall 2019, these three credits are waived.

*For students who matriculated in fall 2019 or after, and who do not also complete a second major, minor, or certificate program, these three credits shall be from a course at the 200-level or above, on a topic related to the language used for the Foreign Language requirement, in the target language or in English translation.

Transfer Students
All transfer students must complete the Hunter Focus. For students who first matriculated prior to fall 2019, these three credits are waived.
All transfer students must complete the Hunter Focus. For students who first matriculated in an associate program, the number of credits required in the Hunter Focus varies with the number of credits transferred.

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any "College Option" credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.

2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group D

  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of Europe, including the ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Additional Comments:

- Students must complete four courses designated for the Pluralism and Diversity Requirement, one from each of four categories.

Additional Comments:

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.
Diversity Requirement, one from each of four categories. The four categories of Pluralism and Diversity focus on major practical or theoretical issues that emerge from, are reflected in, or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, and/or intellectual traditions of the following:

A. Non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America, or those indigenous to the Americas;
B. One or more of the following groups in the US: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, and Native Americans;
C. Women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation;
D. Europe, including ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Any one course with a Pluralism and Diversity designation can satisfy only one Pluralism and Diversity category but may also fulfill any other requirement.

Transfer Students

Transfer students must take at least two courses designated for different categories of the Pluralism and Diversity requirement. The number of courses required in Pluralism and Diversity is determined by the number of credits transferred.

Major Requirements - Core

Type: Completion Requirement

Fulfill ALL of the following requirements:

Earn at least 9 credits from the following:

- History 100-level Courses
Earn at least 6 credits from the following:
- History 200-level Courses

Not including HIST29000 History Practicum

Earn at least 9 credits from the following:
- History 300+ level Courses

Not including HIST30000 Historical Research / HIST40000 Historical Research Honors

History Practicum

Complete ALL of the following Courses:
- HIST29000 - History Practicum
  - Majors must have passed 9 credits of HIST-designated courses before enrolling in HIST29000 History Practicum. No more than 6 of the 9 credits required for HIST29000 History Practicum enrollment may be at the 100 level.
  - A minimum grade of C is required to receive credit for HIST29000 History Practicum.

Historical Research or Historical Research Honors

Complete ALL of the following Courses:
- HIST30000 - Historical Research
  - OR HIST40000 - Historical Research Honors
  - A minimum grade of C is required to receive credit for HIST30000 Historical Research/HIST40000 Historical Research Honors.

Geographic Distribution

Within the requirements for the major (exclusive of HIST30000 Historical Research) students must complete a minimum of 6 credits in each of the following geographic fields:

1. United States history
2. European history (includes Russia and the U.S.S.R.)
3. World/Non-Western history (includes Asia, Africa, Middle East, Latin America)

Chronological Distribution

Within the requirements for the major (exclusive of HIST30000 Historical Research) students must also complete a minimum of 3 credits in a course that is largely focused on years prior to 1815:

- If the course is at the 100-level, it must cover material that is entirely pre-1815.
- If the course is at the 200-level or higher, the majority of the material in it must be pre-1815.

Teacher Education Pathway

Students planning to teach this subject in grades 7-12 should look at the School of Education: Program List for information about their programs that lead to the recommendation for New York State Initial Certification required to be a lead teacher in NYS public schools.

Additional Comments:

Major Requirements - Honors

Type Completion Requirement

Honors in History

Students will be eligible for honors in history upon the completion of all of the requirements for the major (including HIST30000 Historical Research) with a 3.5 GPA and a 3.0 cumulative GPA at the time of graduation. In order to receive honors students may complete a portion of their major requirements in one of the following ways. (Choose one of the following options 1, 2 or 3):

1. completing HIST30000 Historical Research with a grade of B or better in lieu of HIST30000 Historical Research, which is required for the major
2. completing 3 credits with a grade of B or better in an honors seminar, problems course, or tutorial (with departmental permission) in lieu of one of their 300-level or higher courses required for the major. Such seminars, honors courses, or tutorial options include:
   - HIST48300 Prob in Am Hist-Hnr
   - HIST48400 Problems in History (Honors)
   - HIST48500 Prob Nonwest His Hnr

Additional Comments:

- At least two courses (6 credits) must be at the 300-level or above. Internships do not count toward completion of the minor, although students completing the minor may elect to include an internship as an additional course. Independent studies (tutorials) and HIST 400 are available only to History Majors and, thus, do not count toward the minor.
- At least two of the courses (or 6 credits) must be taken in the History Department at Hunter College. Courses taken in other disciplines will not count toward the minor unless cross-listed and taken under the appropriate HIST course code. Transfer courses must be approved by the History Undergraduate Advisor.
- There are no prerequisites for the minor, although certain courses may have their own prerequisites.
- P/NC Policy: Only a letter grade (A, B, C, D, including + or -) will be accepted by the department in the required courses for the minor. Students cannot receive a grade of P/NC in any course used for the minor.

Course Title
The World of the Bible
Department(s)
History
Description
The Hebrew Bible (the Christian Old Testament) is a library of works that reflect much more than one thousand years of ancient Jewish history that has attained immense spiritual authority in history and still in our time. The Bible is a collection of many writings -- narratives, laws, poetry of various kinds, prophetic oracles, proverbs, reflections on life, wisdom, etc. These works were influenced by almost all the ancient civilizations of the Middle East from Mesopotamia and Egypt to the Greeks and Romans. Biblical writing relates to many great themes of human self-exploration: why there is a universe at all, what is the goal of history and why it full of turmoil, what are the supreme values, the meaning of collective and individual existence -- and suffering, the relation of faith, revelation, and spiritual redemption. Biblical authors were reacting not only to internal problems of the people of Israel. They not only borrowed from the surrounding cultures but viewed them critically. A historical concern of the course is how the biblical writings came in to be written down against a background of social turmoil, military upheavals, and power politics. We will also discuss how the Hebrew Bible became a ground of ancient Christianity and rabbinic Judaism (and indirectly Islam). Study of "the biblical world" is almost the study of world history in miniature. No prior religious knowledge is required. A student who does have some background should find it challenged by the historical analysis of this course.

Churchill's Britain
Department(s)
History
Description
This course looks at the history of Britain and its empire in the 20th century. The emphasis will be on the world wars and their impact on British military and diplomatic power, and thus on the spread of British imperial rule up to the 1920s, as well as on the changes the wars brought to the British economy, society and culture and, ultimately, the collapse of the empire after 1945. The major theme of the course will be how to understand Britain's 'decline' in the 20th century.

Overview

Academic Institution
HTR01

Course Title
American Cultural History

Department(s)
History

Description
In this course we will explore several significant themes in American cultural history from the late nineteenth through the late twentieth centuries. Through close readings of selected primary and secondary works (both written and visual) we will consider the meanings of popular, proto-mass, and mass culture as well as the nature of different levels of cultural tastes and styles in modern American history. Reflecting on the broader social and political context of these developments we will study a range of topics, including the myth of the self-made man, the role of the frontier and the cowboy, and critiques of mass consumer culture. Central to our historical examination of American culture will be an effort to appraise and describe how American writers, artists, orators, cultural critics and everyday people constructed narratives (written, spoken, musical, visual) of identity for themselves along ethnic, racial, gendered, class-based and national lines, how the construction of those narratives were related to each other and, how those narratives changed over time depending on specific political and social contexts.

Mathematics & Statistics Department

Overview
Mathematics has many aspects: it is the language and tool of the sciences, a cultural phenomenon with a rich historical tradition, and a model of abstract reasoning. The course offerings and the major in Mathematics reflect these multiple facets. The Mathematics major provides a broad education in various areas of mathematics in a program flexible enough to accommodate many ranges of interest. The major introduces students to the fundamental areas of mathematics and provides some degree of specialization in one or more areas. It trains students in the analytic thinking characteristic of pure and applied mathematics and provides familiarity with rigorous methods of mathematical proof. In addition to the standard Mathematics Major, the department offers a number of specialized undergraduate tracks for students interested in pursuing careers in bioinformatics or in preparing for teaching: the concentration Quantitative Biology, the concentration Preparation for Adolescent Education (Grades 7-12), and the concentration Preparation for Childhood Education (Grades 1-6).

What can I do with my degree in Mathematics and Statistics?
The Mathematics major prepares students for careers in business, government, research and teaching. The study of statistics provides the student with analytical tools that may find application in various fields within the sciences and social sciences. Bioinformatics is a rapidly developing area open to students in statistics with a working knowledge of computing and biological sciences. Actuarial science is one area open to students in statistics who also have backgrounds in such subjects as computer science, mathematics and economics.

Credit and Course Exemption
The department offers credit or course exemption based on standard examinations such as AP. Inquiries should be made at the department office.

Mathematics Proficiency and Placement
All students entering Hunter College must demonstrate proficiency in the basic skills through their scores on the mathematics assessment exam. Exemptions are given for SATs, ACT, NY Regents, and for certain other entrance categories. The placement exam further assesses a student’s preparedness for certain courses in mathematics, statistics, and other disciplines at the college. Students may enroll in these courses only if their scores on the placement exam are at appropriate levels or if they have taken college courses in the required mathematics. Students who need to place into courses by examination and have not taken the placement exam are advised to schedule the test with the Testing Center, Room 150 Hunter North, 212-772-4868, http://hunter.cuny.edu/testingcenter, well in advance of registration. Students should notice the mathematics and statistics prerequisites that are indicated in the descriptions of courses and majors so they can effectively plan their studies.

Students may take no more than two courses from one department or program to fulfill categories Common Core.

Transfer Students

- Transfer students who have earned an AA/AS degree from an accredited institution, including CUNY, and who matriculated in fall 2013 and after will have fulfilled the Common Core.
- For all other CUNY transfer students, any unmet Common Core requirements must be completed while matriculated at Hunter.
- Non-CUNY transfer students without an AA/AS degree should confer with their adviser to determine whether they have met CCC requirements.

2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements

Degree Requirements - College Option/Hunter Focus

Completion Requirement

Earn at least 12 credits

The Hunter Focus consists of 12 credits total. The composition of these credits will vary depending on the student’s matriculation status and language.
Students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement; after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study. Exceptions:

- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three "STEM variant" science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 1, and Intermediate level 2) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

Degree Requirements - Pluralism and Diversity

Additional Comments:
Pluralism and Diversity Requirement

Requirement

Fulfill ALL of the following requirements:

Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group A
A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America or those indigenous to the Americas.

Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group B
A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of Europe, including the ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group C
A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of the following: A. Non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America, or those indigenous to the Americas; B. One or more of the following groups in the US: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, and Native Americans; C. Women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation; D. Europe, including ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group D
A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of one or more of the following groups in the United States of America: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans and Native Americans.

Additional Comments:
Students must complete four courses designated for the Pluralism and Diversity Requirement, one from each of four categories. The four categories of Pluralism and Diversity focus on major practical or theoretical issues that emerge from, are reflected in, or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, and/or intellectual traditions of the following:

- A. Non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America, or those indigenous to the Americas;
- B. One or more of the following groups in the US: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, and Native Americans;
- C. Women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation;
- D. Europe, including ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Please note that not all sections of a course are necessarily offered with significant writing. To satisfy the Writing Requirement a section designated as W in the Schedule of Classes must be taken.

2nd Degree Students
- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Additional Comments:
- Students complete the BA in pure mathematics with 30 additional credits at the graduate level in pure mathematics approved by the departmental graduate adviser.
- Students complete the BA in mathematics with 30 additional credits at the graduate level in applied mathematics, statistics, and computer science approved by the departmental graduate adviser.
- Students complete the BA in statistics with 30 additional credits at the graduate level in applied mathematics, statistics, and computer science approved by the departmental graduate adviser.

Required Math Courses (24 Credits)
- MATH15500 - Intr Math Proofs
- MATH20000 - Calculus 3
- MATH25400 - Ordinary Differential Equations
- MATH25500 - Vector Analysis
- MATH26000 - Linear Algebra
- MATH31000 - Abstract Algebra I
- MATH35100 - Mathematical Analysis I
- STAT21300 - Introduction to Applied Statistics

Official course codes and names may vary. Always consult with a relevant authority to confirm the correct course names and codes.
Elective Courses (9 credits)

Earn at least 9 credits from the following:

- Mathematics Upper Level
- Statistics Upper Level

The student must complete three 3-credit mathematics or statistics courses chosen from the 300- or 400-level courses in mathematics or statistics listed by the department and approved by the undergraduate mathematics adviser. Factors affecting the choice of electives will include the student’s career goals (preparation for graduate study, education, careers in business, government service or industry), the student’s other major, where applicable, and the availability of courses due to the course rotation schedule.

Symbolic Computation Proficiency Requirement. Earn (0-3 credits) from course listed below

Complete ANY of the following Courses:

- MATH12600 - Precalculus Technology Laboratory
- MATH15400 - An Introduction to Symbolic Computation
- MATH38500 - Numerical Methods 1

As a requirement for graduation with a BA in Mathematics, students must demonstrate entry level proficiency in symbolic computation. The requirement can be met in any of the following ways:

- Passing a departmental exam in a computer algebra system (currently we use MATHEMATICA or the equivalent)

      - MATH14000 - Mathematical Reasoning Workshop
      - MATH15000 - Calculus I
      - MATH15200 - Calc for Life and Soc Science

These courses may be counted for credit in more than one program:
- MATH10100 Algebra for College Students
- MATH101EN Algebra College Stud-Enhanced
- MATH10150 Mastery Symbolic Computation
- MATH12400 College Algebra & Trig
- MATH12500 Precalculus
- MATH12550 Precalculus with Workshop
- MATH14000 Mathematical Reasoning Workshop
- MATH15000 Calculus I
- MATH15200 Calc for Life and Soc Science
A student interested in actuarial work should take the following courses:

- MATH15000 Calculus I
- MATH15500 Calculus 2
- MATH15600 Intr Math Proof Wrks
- MATH25000 Calculus 3
- MATH26000 Linear Algebra
- STAT31100 Probability Theory
- STAT31300 Intro to Math Stat

Students are also encouraged to take courses in accounting, economics and computer science. A student majoring either in Statistics or Mathematics could also complete the Actuarial Sequence as a part of his/her major requirements. A review for the Actuarial Exams is not a part of the curriculum, however, and it is left to the individual student to study for and take those exams.

Complete ALL of the following Courses:

- MATH15600 - Intr Math Proof Wrks
- MATH25000 - Calculus 3
- MATH25400 - Ordinary Differential Equations
- OR MATH35400 - Dynamical Systems and Chaos
- MATH26000 - Linear Algebra
- STAT21200 - Discrete Probability
- STAT21300 - Introduction to Applied Statistics
- STAT31100 - Probability Theory
- STAT31200 - Stochastic Processes
- STAT31300 - Introduction to Mathematical Statistics

Elective Courses (3 credits)

Earn at least 3 credits
The student must complete one additional 3-credit statistics or mathematics course approved by the undergraduate statistics adviser.

Additional Comments:
Students cannot receive a grade of P/NC in all STAT courses.

Additional Comments:

Students may take no more than two courses from one department or program to fulfill categories Common Core.

Transfer Students

- Transfer students who have earned an AA/AS degree from an accredited institution, including CUNY, and who matriculated in fall 2013 and after will have fulfilled the Common Core.
- For all other CUNY transfer students, any unmet Common Core requirements must be completed while matriculated at Hunter.
- Non-CUNY transfer students without an AA/AS degree should confer with their adviser to determine whether they have met CCC requirements.

2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Degree Requirements - College Option/Hunter Focus

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Earn at least 12 credits</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The Hunter Focus consists of 12 credits total. The composition of these credits will vary depending on the student's matriculation status and language proficiency. All students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement; after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study.

Exceptions:

- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three "STEM variant" science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major, or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

| CREDITS OF FOREIGN LANGUAGE NEEDED | CREDITS OF CONCENTRATED STUDY NEEDED |
Transfer Students

All transfer students must complete the Hunter Focus. For students who first matriculated in an associate program, the number of credits required in the Hunter Focus varies with the number of credits transferred.

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any “College Option” credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.

2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Degree Requirements - Pluralism and Diversity

Type

Completion Requirement

Fulfill ALL of the following requirements:

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group A

    A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America or those indigenous to the Americas.

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group B

    A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, immigrant experiences and/or intellectual traditions of one or more of the following groups in the United States of America: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans and Native Americans.

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group C

    A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues...
A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group D

A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of Europe, including the ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Additional Comments:

Students must complete four courses designated for the Pluralism and Diversity Requirement, one from each of four categories. The four categories of Pluralism and Diversity focus on major practical or theoretical issues that emerge from, are reflected in, or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, and/or intellectual traditions of the following:

A. Non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America, or those indigenous to the Americas;
B. One or more of the following groups in the US: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, and Native Americans;
C. Women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation;
D. Europe, including ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Any one course with a Pluralism and Diversity designation can satisfy only one Pluralism and Diversity category but may also fulfill any other requirement.

Transfer Students

Transfer students must take at least two courses designated for different categories of the Pluralism and Diversity requirement. The number of courses required in Pluralism and Diversity is determined by the number of credits transferred.

Degree Requirements - Writing Intensive

Type: Completion Requirement

Complete at least 1 course in the following course sets:

- Writing Intensive

Transfer Students

Transfer students must take at least one Writing Intensive course, designated with a "W" in the catalog, at Hunter College. The number of Writing Intensive courses required is determined by the number of credits transferred.

Department(s)
- Mathematics and Statistics

Description
This course is replacing the course MATH 12500 (STEM) for students who do not intend to take calculus. Functions and their graphs; linear, quadratic, polynomial, rational, exponential, logarithmic, and trigonometric functions; topics in trigonometry; graphical and analytical solutions to systems of equations. Students who would plan on taking calculus should register for MATH 12550 (STEM) instead of this course. Students who complete this course will need to register for MATH 14000 in order to take calculus. This course is equivalent to Math 12500 for grade replacement purposes.

Course Title
- Precalculus with Workshop

Department(s)
- Mathematics and Statistics

Description
This course replaces the course MATH 12500 (STEM) for students who intend to take calculus. It is designed to develop an understanding of topics and skills which are fundamental to the study of calculus and other science classes. The topics covered are: linear, quadratic, polynomial, rational, exponential, logarithmic, and trigonometric functions and their graphs and applications; the Fundamental Theorem of Algebra; sequences, sums, and the Binomial Theorem. In addition to lecture, students are also required to attend a 50-minute recitation session once a week. This course is equivalent to Math 12500 for grade replacement purposes.

Mathematical Methods for the Physical Sciences
Department(s)
Mathematics and Statistics
Description
The course will concentrate on the solution of linear partial differential equations and boundary value problems. Solution techniques such as separation of variables, Fourier series, Green's functions, and Laplace transforms will be covered. These will be applied to several equations which occur in physical applications such as the heat equation, the Laplace equation, and the wave equation.

Statistical Analysis of Biological Data
Department(s)
Mathematics and Statistics
Description
This course intends to be a basic statistical data analysis course for biology students. It is a combination of theory and R practice. The course introduces basic statistical concepts and statistical analysis using R. Numerous real biological data sets have been analyzed in the textbook and are available for downloading from the author's website below. Throughout the semester, students will be performing practical data analysis using R that are intervened with lectures under the guidance of the instructor.

Bayesian Statistical Inference in the Sciences

- Academic Institution: HTR01
- Course Title: Bayesian Statistical Inference in the Sciences
- Department(s): Mathematics and Statistics
- Description: Fundamental principles and techniques of probability, statistical inference and data analysis, as pertains to the sciences, especially bioinformatics. Random variables and their distributions. Central limit theorem. Conditional probability. Markov chains and Hidden Markov Models. Bayesian statistical paradigm and inference using Markov chain Monte Carlo. Computer simulations and data analysis. This new course will cover intermediate-level topics in probability theory and statistical inference, with an emphasis on Bayesian statistical inference. It is designed for students who have sufficient mathematical background, and who may want to devote just one semester learning about the use of probability and statistics in the sciences, in engineering, and especially in the emerging field of bioinformatics. It is intended for biology students interested in the quantitative and computational aspects of their discipline, and for computer science students seeking to explore the theoretical foundations of data mining and structural learning. Thus, such students would have available to them a one-semester course that covers healthy combination of the main ST.

Medical Lab Sciences Department

Overview
The Department of Medical Laboratory Sciences offers a rigorous and extensive education in biomedical science that prepares students for employment in clinical (hospital and private diagnostic), research (academic/biotechnology/pharmaceutical) and public health laboratories and for advanced degrees in graduate (Master's/Ph.D.) and professional (medical/dental/physician assistant) schools as well as advanced clinical certifications. Two academic degrees for undergraduates are offered: the BS in Medical Laboratory Sciences: Biomedical Science and the BS in Medical Laboratory Sciences: Clinical Science. Both majors emphasize laboratory training through classroom work. The Medical Laboratory Sciences: Biomedical Science major is intended for those students who plan to obtain advanced graduate or medical degrees. Students in this major are encouraged to perform independent study research projects with faculty. The Medical Laboratory Sciences: Clinical Science major is licensure qualifying and is intended for those students who plan to take the New York State Education Department (NYSED) licensure exam for clinical laboratory technologists. A license is required to work as a clinical laboratory technologist in NYS. Clinical laboratory technologists perform analytical tests on patient samples and play an essential role in the diagnosis and treatment of disease. The Clinical Science major requires students to perform a departmentally-arranged eight-week full time summer internship in a hospital or private diagnostic laboratory. Students in the Clinical Science major may also pursue advanced graduate and medical degrees.

What can I do with my degree in Medical Laboratory Sciences?
Graduates pursue entry-level careers in diagnostic or research labs, as well as further education in graduate programs, medical school and other clinical specialties. MLS graduates work in hospitals, nonprofit research institutions and pharmaceutical and biotechnology companies.

Requirements

Degree Requirements - Bachelor of Science

Type: Completion Requirement

Fulfill ALL of the following requirements:

- Earn at least 120 credits
- Earn at least 30 credits In Residence at Hunter College
- Earn at least 60 credits Liberal Arts and Sciences Content Courses
- Earn a minimum GPA of 2.0

Additional Comments:

General Education Requirements - Common Core

Type: Completion Requirement

Fulfill ALL of the following requirements:

- Earn at least 6 credits from the following:
  - Required Core English Composition
  Students who receive an “exemption” for ENGL 12000 or for a course in English Comp 2 are deemed to have fulfilled English Composition 1 or 2, respectively.

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Required Core Mathematical and Quantitative Reasoning
  Some courses in this categories carry more than 3 credits (the “STEM variant” courses). Students who elect to take these courses may apply only three credits towards fulfilling the Common Core.

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Required Core Life and Physical Sciences
  Some courses in this categories carry more than 3 credits (the “STEM variant” courses). Students who elect to take these courses may apply only three credits towards fulfilling the Common Core.

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Flexible Core Scientific World
  Some courses in this categories carry more than 3 credits (the “STEM variant” courses). Students who elect to take these courses may apply only three credits towards fulfilling the Common Core.

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Flexible Core Creative Expression

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Flexible Core U.S. Experience in Its Diversity

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Flexible Core World Cultures and Global Issues

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Flexible Core Individual and Society Social Science

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Flexible Core Individual and Society Humanities
Students may take no more than two courses from one department or program to fulfill categories Common Core.

Transfer Students
- Transfer students who have earned an AA/AS degree from an accredited institution, including CUNY, and who matriculated in fall 2019 and after will have fulfilled the Common Core.
- For all other CUNY transfer students, any unmet Common Core requirements must be completed while matriculated at Hunter.
- Non-CUNY transfer students without an AA/AS degree should confer with their adviser to determine whether they have met CCC requirements.

2nd Degree Students
- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Degree Requirements - College Option/Hunter Focus
Type: Completion Requirement

Earn at least 12 credits

The Hunter Focus consists of 12 credits total. The composition of these credits will vary depending on the student’s matriculation status and language proficiency. All students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement; after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study.

Exceptions:
- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three "STEM variant" science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 1, and Intermediate level 2) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any “College Option” credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language
Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study
Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.

2nd Degree Students
- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Degree Requirements - Pluralism and Diversity

Type

Completion Requirement

Fulfill ALL of the following requirements:

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group A

    A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America or those indigenous to the Americas.

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group B

    A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, immigrant experiences and/or intellectual traditions of one or more of the following groups in the United States of America: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans and Native Americans.

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group C

    A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation.

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group D

    A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of Europe, including the ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Additional Comments:

Students must complete four courses designated for the Pluralism and Diversity Requirement, one from each of four categories. The four categories of Pluralism and Diversity focus on major practical or theoretical issues that emerge from, are reflected in, or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, and/or intellectual traditions of the following:

A. Non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America, or those indigenous to the Americas;
B. One or more of the following groups in the U.S: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, and Native Americans;
C. European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America or those indigenous to the Americas;
D. That emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America or those indigenous to the Americas.

Medical Laboratory Sciences (MLS): Clinical Science is a pre-professional major, preparing students for careers in laboratories devoted to promoting, maintaining and restoring human health. The MLS curriculum builds upon the basic science courses required to enter the program. Courses in the major fall into the following categories:

- "fundamental lab skills"
- "clinical subspecialties"
- "advanced biomedical courses"
- "pre-professional practice"

Emphasis is placed on problem solving and development of laboratory strategies, in addition to theoretical knowledge and practical skills in each of...

- MATH15500 - Calculus 2
- CHEM22500 - Organic Chemistry 2 (Lab)
- CHEM22404 - Organic Chemistry 2 (Lec)
- MLS54900 - Honors
- MLS48002 - Independent Study - Medical Laboratory Sciences
- MLS48003 - Independent Study - Medical Laboratory Sciences
- MLS49000 - Calculus 1
- STAT11300 - Elementary Probability and Statistics

Based on placement exams or transferred courses, students may place into some more advanced Mathematics and Statistics courses without taking Hunter College prerequisites. See the Mathematics and Statistics department for details.

- These courses may be counted for credit in more than one program:
  - MATH10100 - Algebra for College Students
  - MATH10110 - Algebra College Student-Encounter
  - MATH10180 - College Algebra
  - MATH10150 - Mastery Symbolic Computation
  - MATH12400 - College Algebra 2 (Lec)

- CHEM22204 - Organic Chemistry 1 (Lec)
- CHEM22300 - Organic Chemistry Laboratory I
- PHYS11000 - General Physics: Introductory Course in Mechanics, Heat and Sound

Additional Comments:

The requirements for consideration for admission to Medical Laboratory Sciences - BS programs are as follows:

- Completion of 60 credits before enrolling in MLS, including: one year of general chemistry with lab (CHEM 10200 (STEM), CHEM 10400 (STEM), CHEM 10600 (STEM) or equivalent)
- 1 year of general biology with lab (Biol 10200 (STEM), Biol 10200 (STEM) or equivalent)
- overall GPA of at least 2.5

Students can enter the Medical Laboratory Sciences major in fall and spring semesters. Advisers welcome e-mail inquiries anytime. To apply both current Hunter College students and transfer students must complete a Transfer Application with the CUNY University Application Processing Center. Visit http://www.hunter.cuny.edu/prospectivestudents/ug_students/transfer.shtml and select On-Line Application from the choices. Be sure to select “Medical Laboratory Sciences” at Hunter College as the choice of curriculum. Use CUNY curriculum code 0344 when applying. Admissions take place on a rolling basis so students should apply as early as possible. Admission deadlines for fall and spring semesters are January 1 and September 15, respectively. Students are encouraged to complete most of their Hunter Core Requirement - Fall 2013 to Spring 2019 (HCR) which includes the CUNY Common Core Requirement, the Hunter Focus on foreign language and the Concurrent Requirements before entering the program, but liberal arts classes can be interspersed with major courses. Meeting the minimum requirements does not guarantee acceptance into the program, which is based, by necessity, on the limitations of space and resources. The Hunter College Department of Medical Lab Sciences is dedicated to equal opportunity for all applicants who meet admission requirements.

Based on placement exams or transferred courses, students may place into some more advanced Mathematics and Statistics courses without taking Hunter College prerequisites. See the Mathematics and Statistics department for details.

Independent Study - Medical Laboratory Sciences
Department(s)
Medical Laboratory Sciences
Description
These courses are research courses designed to introduce undergraduate students to biomedical research under the supervision of an MLS faculty member. Students learn how to formulate hypotheses, develop research questions, design experiments, and collect, analyze and present data. These courses may be taken for a maximum of 6 credits. Courses with the same number of credits may only be taken twice. Departmental consent required.

Music Department

Overview
The Music Department offers students the chance to explore musical expression through performance and academic study. Opportunities to learn from some of the best theorists, musicologists and ethnomusicologists in the field exist alongside exciting performance opportunities for every playing and singing ability. All undergraduate music majors include training in performance, aural skills, music theory, and music history, in the context of a strong liberal-arts degree program. Many other subjects, including composition, arranging, computer music, and ethnomusicology are available as electives. The undergraduate programs provide both the foundation for further study of any area of music and a liberal-arts background that can serve as a basis for careers in other fields.

Our ensembles include College Choir, Chamber Singers, Opera, Jazz Vocal Workshop, Jazz Ensemble, Jazz and Popular Music Combos, Chamber Music, and the Hunter Symphony. The BA degree can be completed evenings or days. In addition, the department sponsors numerous extracurricular events, including concerts, lectures, and master classes. Private lessons in instruments and voice are provided to all performance majors and many other music majors by a distinguished roster of performance teachers. Financial aid is available to qualified performance majors and other majors who need to study with private teachers not on the staff.

What can I do with my degree in Music?
Graduates of the department go on to a variety of careers in music and beyond. Graduates of the BA/MA dual degree program in Music/Music Teacher Education Pre-K-12 - BA/MA are qualified to teach in the public elementary and high schools of New York State.

Teacher Education Pathway
Students planning to teach this subject in grades 7-12 should look at the School of Education: Program List for information about their programs that lead to the recommendation for New York State Initial Certification required to be a lead teacher in NYS public schools.

Graduate Study
Seniors of high academic standing who are recommended by the department may be permitted to take graduate courses for undergraduate credit. Seniors within 9 credits of graduation may apply to the Admissions Office for permission to take graduate courses creditable toward the MA degree.

Additional Comments:
Students may take no more than two courses from one department or program to fulfill categories Common Core.

Transfer Students
- Transfer students who have earned an AA/AS degree from an accredited institution, including CUNY, and who matriculated in fall 2013 and after will have fulfilled the Common Core.
- For all other CUNY transfer students, any unmet Common Core requirements must be completed while matriculated at Hunter.
- Non-CUNY transfer students without an AA/AS degree should confer with their adviser to determine whether they have met CCC requirements.

2nd Degree Students
- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
will vary depending on the student's matriculation status and language proficiency. All students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement; after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study.

Exceptions:
- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three "STEM variant" science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language
Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study
Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

*For students who matriculated prior to fall 2019, these three credits are waived.

Transfer Students
All transfer students must complete the Hunter Focus. For students who first matriculated in an associate program, the number of credits required in the Hunter Focus varies with the number of credits transferred.

</tbody>
</table>

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any “College Option” credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language
Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study
Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.

2nd Degree Students
- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements
Degree Requirements - Pluralism and Diversity

Fulfill ALL of the following requirements:

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group A

  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America or those indigenous to the Americas.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group B

  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, immigrant experiences and/or intellectual traditions of one or more of the following groups in the United States of America: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans and Native Americans.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group C

  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group D

  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of Europe, including the ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Additional Comments:

Students must complete four courses designated for the Pluralism and Diversity Requirement, one from each of four categories. The four categories of Pluralism and Diversity focus on major practical or theoretical issues that emerge from, are reflected in, or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, and/or intellectual traditions of the following:

- A. Non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America, or those indigenous to the Americas;
- B. One or more of the following groups in the US: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, and Native Americans;
- C. Women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation;
- D. Europe, including ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Any one course with a Pluralism and Diversity designation can satisfy only one Pluralism and Diversity category but may also fulfill any other requirement.

Transfer Students

Transfer students must take at least two courses designated for different categories of the Pluralism and Diversity requirement. The number of courses required in Pluralism and Diversity is determined by the number of credits transferred.

<table>

Note: Specific sections of courses containing significant writing are listed with a W designation in the Schedule of Classes. Please note that not all sections of a course are necessarily offered with significant writing. To satisfy the Writing Requirement a section designated as W in the Schedule of Classes must be taken.

2nd Degree Students

Piano Proficiency Requirement

All music majors must demonstrate elementary proficiency at the piano. Students should plan to fulfill this requirement during their first year of study. A passing grade on the piano proficiency examination is a prerequisite for the third semester of study in music theory (MUSTH 32000). Students entering Hunter with limited keyboard background may take MUSPF 21300 - MUSPF 21400 (Piano I and II) for elective credit; a passing grade of C or better in MUSPF 21400 satisfies the piano proficiency requirement in lieu of the examination.

Degree Requirements - College Option/Hunter Focus

Type

- Completion Requirement

Earn at least 12 credits

The Hunter Focus consists of 12 credits total. The composition of these credits will vary depending on the student's matriculation status and language proficiency. All students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement; after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study.

Exceptions:
- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three "STEM variant" science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

*For students who matriculated prior to fall 2019, these three credits are waived.

*For students who matriculated in fall 2019 or after, and who do not also complete a second major, minor, or certificate program, these three credits shall be from a course, at the 200-level or above, on a topic related to the

Additional Comments:

- Students may take no more than two courses from one department or program to fulfill categories Common Core.

Transfer Students

- Transfer students who have earned an AA/AS degree from an accredited institution, including CUNY, and who matriculated in fall 2013 and after will have fulfilled the Common Core.
- For all other CUNY transfer students, any unmet Common Core requirements must be completed while matriculated at Hunter.
- Non-CUNY transfer students without an AA/AS degree should confer with their adviser to determine whether they have met CCC requirements.

2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any “College Option” credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.

Course Title
Music and Politics
Department(s)
Music
Description
This course examines music and politics in cross-cultural perspective. Some of the main questions the course explores are: why is music so important to social movements around the world? How have governments and non-governmental groups used music to build national solidarity? Why have so many states seen fit to censor certain music while promoting others? And what roles do markets and media play in which music circulate and become effectual catalysts of change? The course is based on listening, viewing audio-visual materials, reading historical, ethnographic, and analytic literatures, and discussing all of these materials in class. We will focus on music, cultural policy and change, in Bulgaria, the People's Republic of China; postcolonial popular music in Nigeria; histories of folk and popular music in social movements in North America, and music, religion and politics in Muslim majority societies such as Afghanistan and Iran. Students will leave the class having experienced a broad spectrum of musical genres, sounds, political systems, texts and attitudes about art, folk and popular music.

History of Rap Music

This course will trace rap's history from its roots in Black music of the 1960s and 70s, its beginnings at DJ parties in the South Bronx, its move from the underground into the mainstream, to its impact on popular music across the world in the new millennium. We will examine different rap styles and techniques, such as the turntable skills of Grandmaster Flash, the drum-machine-generated beats of Run DMC, Public Enemy's abrasive layers of sound, "laid back" Los Angeles G-Funk, Biggie's formidable flow, and Dirty South bouncy bass and hi-hat rattles. We will look at the connections between rap styles and lyrics and social changes and conflicts in US society, such as mass incarceration and the criminalization of Black youth, the 1992 Los Angeles rebellion, and the politics of respectability versus rap's imperative to always keep it real.

Punk Rock and Rebellion

The purpose of this course is to explore contemporary Jewish music as an expression of diaspora identity.

Music and War

Course Title
Music, Modes of Listening, and Nostalgia
Department(s)
Music
Description
This course explores the intersection between two seemingly unrelated topics: 1) the ways in which market pressures and shifting technological developments have influenced dominant modes of listening to music, and 2) the emergence of a culture of nostalgia and obsessive reflexivity in both popular and art-music domains. Primary readings will include Simon Reynolds’s Retromania: Pop Culture’s Addiction to Its Own Past and Tim Rutherford-Johnson’s Music After the Fall.

Overview Academic Institution HTR01 Course Title The Oratorio Department(s) Music Description This course surveys the oratorio genre from ca. 1600 to 1900 through the study of selected repertory from the perspective of style analysis, socio-cultural history and performance practice. Repertory will range from standard pieces by Carissimi, Handel, Haydn, Mendelssohn, and Elgar to lesser-known pieces by Cavalieri, Marc-Antoine Charpentier, Schumann and others. Because of the genre's unique aural emphasis on text and music at the expense of visual aspects like staging and acting, emphasis will be placed on the composer as an exegete, i.e. as a musical interpreter of the text and the drama. Although prior knowledge of foreign languages (Italian, French and German) is useful, it is not required for the course. Text and translations will be provided.

Art of Transcription
Department(s)
Music
Description
This class is designed for piano majors. Explore the great and diverse art form of piano transcription, which is essentially the adaptation and arrangement of works for the piano that were originally intended for another medium. This practice became very popular in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries as the piano itself increased in production and modernization, and a growing bourgeoisie sought to enjoy great symphonies and operas in their own homes. Study literal transcriptions that remain faithful to the original score as well as those where the work becomes transformed into something entirely new. Each student will learn a transcription suitable to his or her level of piano study.

HTR01

Course Title

Solfege 2

Music

Description

An introduction to basic music technology skills: music notation software, MIDI sequencing, and digital audio editing. This course will introduce students to the three ways in which new computer software is used to aid contemporary musicians: to compose and engrave music; to play and record MIDI instruments, such as synthesizers; and to record and edit digital audio. Although this is a practical, 'hands on' course, it will also cover the basic ideas necessary to understand these tools: the principles of music notation; acoustics and the physical nature of sound; and copyright issues.

Philosophy Department

Overview

Philosophy studies the most fundamental questions that human beings ask — about individual and social action, the possibility and limits of knowledge, the truth and justification of beliefs, human nature and freedom, the existence of God and the operations of nature. Philosophy approaches these questions in a systematic way and philosophers have worked out more or less comprehensive theories to answer them (or show why they cannot be answered). The courses offered by the Philosophy Department are designed to introduce students to the main problems that philosophers study and to the main ideas of such profound and influential thinkers as Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Augustine, Aquinas, Descartes, Hume and Kant.

Philosophy is one of the most important subjects a student can study because it develops the ability to reason clearly and critically, to write thoughtfully, to use intelligence and logic to deal with problems all too often ruled by emotion and prejudice. Philosophy also helps one develop intellectual flexibility and learn to appreciate ideas and beliefs other than those of one's own time, place, class or group. Since it develops these intellectual abilities and habits, the study of philosophy, either in individual courses or as a major or minor, is excellent preparation for any profession or occupation.

Students of philosophy pursue careers in law, business, medicine, government and the arts. Some go on to study philosophy at the graduate level with the aim either of teaching philosophy or of obtaining an advanced degree to further their career objectives.

What can I do with a degree in Philosophy?

Philosophy majors pursue many different careers. Philosophy courses are designed to provide skills that can be used across many fields, rather than to prepare you for a single career. Philosophy prepares students to pursue graduate studies in a variety of fields. Philosophy majors perform extremely well on graduate schools entrance exams and score higher on the GRE than graduates of other majors. Philosophy majors also are among the top performers on the LSAT and GMAT. But pursuing philosophy can also be intrinsically valuable—not just as a means to some end, but as an end in itself. To do philosophy—and, in particular, to do it well—is to exercise your mind in ways that reveal how powerful, creative, and open it can be.

Course Listings

The department especially encourages students majoring in or interested in philosophy, both with fewer than 6 credits toward the major in philosophy, to consult with a departmental advisor about courses and their prerequisites at this stage of their academic career.

- Students may take no more than two courses from one department or program to fulfill categories Common Core.

Transfer Students

- Transfer students who have earned an AA/AS degree from an accredited institution, including CUNY, and who matriculated in fall 2013 and after will have fulfilled the Common Core.
- For all other CUNY transfer students, any unmet Common Core requirements must be completed while matriculated at Hunter.
- Non-CUNY transfer students without an AA/AS degree should confer with their advisor to determine whether they have met CCC requirements.

2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Degree Requirements - College Option/Hunter Focus

Type: Completion Requirement

- Earn at least 12 credits

The Hunter Focus consists of 12 credits total. The composition of these credits will vary depending on the student’s matriculation status and language proficiency. All students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement; after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study.

Exceptions:

- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of...
Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three "STEM variant" science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.

- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

*For students who matriculated prior to fall 2019, these three credits are waived.

*For students who matriculated in fall 2019 or after, and who do not also complete a second major, minor, or certificate program, these three credits shall be from a course, at the 200-level or above, on a topic related to the language used for the Foreign Language requirement, in the target language or in English translation.

Transfer Students

All transfer students must complete the Hunter Focus. For students who first matriculated in an associate program, the number of credits required in the Hunter Focus varies with the number of credits transferred.

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any "College Option" credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student's transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.

2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements
Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group A

A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America or those indigenous to the Americas.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group B

A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, immigrant experiences and/or intellectual traditions of one or more of the following groups in the United States of America: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans and Native Americans.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group C

A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group D

A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of Europe, including the ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Additional Comments:

Students must complete four courses designated for the Pluralism and Diversity Requirement, one from each of four categories. The four categories of Pluralism and Diversity focus on major practical or theoretical issues that emerge from, are reflected in, or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, and/or intellectual traditions of the following:

- A. Non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America, or those indigenous to the Americas;
- B. One or more of the following groups in the US: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, and Native Americans;
- C. Women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation;
- D. Europe, including ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Any one course with a Pluralism and Diversity designation can satisfy only one Pluralism and Diversity category but may also fulfill any other requirement.

Transfer Students

Transfer students must take at least two courses designated for different categories of the Pluralism and Diversity requirement. The number of courses required in Pluralism and Diversity is determined by the number of credits transferred.

Description
Traditionally, environmental ethics has been concerned with the moral basis of our relationship to the natural world, such as our obligations to non-human animals, plants, and entire ecosystems. However, more recently, the broader discipline of environmental philosophy has taken on a wider range of philosophical and ethical issues. This course is an introduction to and a survey of some of those issues.

International Ethics
Department(s)
Philosophy
Description
Through readings on the role of ethics in international relations and philosophies of international law, such concepts as national interest, international community, world peace, self-determination, state sovereignty, human rights, and global justice will be introduced. These concepts will be applied both to classic issues such as just war, international distributive justice, and the legitimacy of nation-states, and to emerging issues such as the ethics of imperial hegemony, environmental sustainability, and ethnic conflicts.

Philosophy of History
Department(s)
Philosophy
Description
This course is designed to introduce students to what philosophers have had to say about history—both in terms of its meaning, if any, and of how to explain and narrate historical events. We will survey the major theories about the philosophy of history, the problems with the concept of historical explanation and interpretation, as well as a variety of major philosophers' attempts to solve these problems. We will also consider how history relates to cognate disciplines in the sciences, social sciences, and humanities.

Plotinus
Description
A study of the background, writings, and legacy of Plotinus. Plotinus is considered to be, with Plato and Aristotle, one of the greatest philosophers of the ancient world and the single most important figure of ancient philosophy from Aristotle's death in 323 B.C.E. to the end of the ancient philosophical schools in 529 C.E. His Enneads articulate a powerful and extensive synthesis of Platonic, Aristotelian, and Stoic ideas along with the mystical and religious currents of thought of late antiquity, now known as Neoplatonism. Through the mediation of his followers, Porphyry, Proclus, and Augustine, Plotinus was a principal influence in medieval Christian, Jewish, and Islamic philosophy, Renaissance and Early Modern Philosophy. The principal goals of the course are to understand the sources and nature of his philosophic system through a careful reading of the Enneads.

Philosophical Problems: Sense and Perception
Department(s)
Philosophy
Description
In this course we will consider three philosophical issues that arise concerning sensory perception. The first issue concerns the common sense assumption that sensory perception takes place in humans through five sense modalities - seeing, hearing, touch, taste, and smell. The second issue concerns whether or not what grounds one can limit what is known or represented in sensory perception. For example, do we hear bells or only sounds (and then infer the existence of bells)? The third issue concerns how we should conceive the causal processes that enable us to perceive the world. In considering these issues, we will rely on material from the history of philosophy as well as work done in the 20th and early 21st centuries. We will begin by doing essential background work on these issues from the history of philosophy. We will then more explicitly consider the three issues by reading works of recent and contemporary philosophers.

Democratic Theory

Department(s)
Philosophy

Description
Democracy is a notion that is frequently taken for granted in practical life. Philosophers, however, have offered divergent understandings of its meaning, and have given alternative, even conflicting, justifications of the sources of its value. This course will focus on the challenging questions of the philosophical foundations of democracy, and particularly on the question of how to effectively justify it. We will consider egalitarian approaches (e.g., Christiano), epistemic approaches (Estlund), deliberative perspectives (e.g., Habermas, Cohen) and common activity approaches (e.g., Gould). Consideration will be given to whether democracy is only instrumentally valuable or is intrinsically so. We will discuss whether democracy is a human right and whether recognizing it as such might be too demanding for the range of contemporary cultures and societies around the world. The course will go on to consider two key questions: 1) What is the proper scope of democracy, i.e., to whom does it extend, only citizens within a nation state or across borders as well? And is democracy only a political notion or is it also relevant to economic and social institutions? 2) What form should democracy take? representative or participatory, especially in view of the new opportunities opened by the internet. The course will then consider a range of questions concerning democracy and gender, including the relation of democracy to interpersonal and social contexts (e.g., the family) and the issue of more effectively representing the perspectives of women within politics. We will conclude by discussing some new questions posed for democracy by globalization and in particular whether there is a role for transnational or even fully global forms of democracy in the contemporary period.

Philosophy Biology

Department(s)
Philosophy

Description
This course will introduce the student to conceptual, ethical, social, and methodological questions concerning biology. Today, biology shapes our collective understanding of ourselves more than any other scientific discipline. It is not uncommon, for example, to read about the discovery of genes for complex psychological traits such as shyness, extroversion, intelligence, anxiety, or mental disorders such as schizophrenia. Evolutionary biologists, psychologists, and journalists have pointed to our evolutionary heritage to argue for, or against, our capacity for altruism, cooperation, or long-term fidelity. Discoveries in neuroscience frequently challenge traditional beliefs about the nature of consciousness, free will, and criminal responsibility. Biomedicine and psychiatry play a profound role in shaping our understanding of what kinds of bodies and minds are healthy or pathological, ‘normal’ or ‘abnormal’, and these ideas influence health care legislation and psychiatric classification. We will address questions from four major areas of biology: evolutionary biology, molecular biology and genetics, neuroscience, and biomedicine and psychiatry. Given the impact of biology for understanding human nature and society, it is of paramount importance for educated citizens to have a clear understanding of some of the major philosophical issues that emerge from different biological disciplines.

Physics & Astronomy Department

Overview
Physics is the study of the basic interactions that govern the behavior of the universe as we know it. As such, a knowledge of physics is necessary for the proper understanding of any science, and, of course, it is an exciting field of study in its own right. The primary mission of the Department of Physics and Astronomy is to provide an outstanding education for our students. Our curriculum serves undergraduate liberal arts students who seek, by the study of physics, to acquire critical thinking skills and develop the understanding and problem-solving abilities which are increasingly needed in our technological society. Undergraduate science majors pursue courses of study such as pre-medicine and computer science, in which a sound foundation in physics is essential to further advancement. The major includes lecture courses, laboratory courses, and a chance for qualified students to participate in research with faculty members.

What can I do with my degree in Physics?
The department offers comprehensive training in physics that can lead to industrial, institutional and government work; graduate study, and a teaching position in grades 7-12.

Physics for Non-Physics Majors
A minimum of one year of physics is recommended for all majors in sciences and health sciences. Medical and dental schools also require one year of physics. Students requiring one year of physics may take either the PHYS 11000 (STEM)-PHYS 12000 (STEM) sequence (9 cr) or the PHYS 11100 (STEM)-PHYS 12100 (STEM) sequence (11 cr). Although both sequences cover the same topics, PHYS 11100 (STEM)-PHYS 12100 (STEM) utilizes elementary calculus and meets for one additional lecture hour each week. It is recommended for science students and those premed students who satisfy the mathematics prerequisite. PHYS 10000 (3 cr) should be taken only by those who want a one semester terminal course in physics; it does not satisfy pre-professional requirements. PHYS 10100, PHYS 11000 (STEM), PHYS 11100 (STEM), and PHYS 12000 (STEM), PHYS 12100 (STEM) should be taken only by those who want a one semester terminal course in physics; it does not satisfy pre-professional requirements. Students should take no more than one first-semester course (PHYS 10100, PHYS 11000 (STEM), PHYS 11100 (STEM)) and no more than one second-semester course (PHYS 12000 (STEM), PHYS 12100 (STEM)) since they may receive credit for no more than one course from each group.

Degree Requirements - College Option/Hunter Focus

Type: Completion Requirement

Earn at least 12 credits

The Hunter Focus consists of 12 credits total. The composition of these credits will vary depending on the student’s matriculation status and language proficiency. All students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement, after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study.

Exceptions:

- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three “STEM variant” science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

*For students who matriculated prior to fall 2019, these three credits are waived.

*For students who matriculated in fall 2019 or after, and who do not also complete a second major, minor, or certificate program, these three credits shall be from a course, at the 200-level or above, on a topic related to the language used for the Foreign Language requirement, in the target language or in English translation.

Transfer Students

All transfer students must complete the Hunter Focus. For students who first matriculated in an associate program, the number of credits required in the Hunter Focus varies with the number of credits transferred.

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any “College Option” credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Transfer Students

- Transfer students who have earned an AA/AS degree from an accredited institution, including CUNY, and who matriculated in fall 2013 and after will have fulfilled the Common Core.
- For all other CUNY transfer students, any unmet Common Core requirements must be completed while matriculated at Hunter.
- Non-CUNY transfer students without an AA/AS degree should confer with their adviser to determine whether they have met CCC requirements.

2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

---

Degree Requirements - College Option/Hunter Focus

Type: Completion Requirement

Earn at least 12 credits

The Hunter Focus consists of 12 credits total. The composition of these credits will vary depending on the student’s matriculation status and language proficiency. All students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement; after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study.

Exceptions:

- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three “STEM variant” science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

*For students who matriculated prior to fall 2019, these three credits are waived.

*For students who matriculated in fall 2019 or after, and who do not also complete a second major, minor, or certificate program, these three credits shall be from a course, at the 200-level or above, on a topic related to the language used for the Foreign Language requirement, in the target language or in English translation.

Transfer Students

All transfer students must complete the Hunter Focus. For students who first matriculated in an associate program, the number of credits required in the Hunter Focus varies with the number of credits transferred.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Political Science Department

Overview
Political science deals with the various political, social, economic, and cultural arrangements through which people govern their lives. It attempts to interpret the past and explain the present, and often dares to draw images of the future. As a field of study, it covers several fields, from the evolution of political philosophy and the implications of contemporary political concepts to the problems of development in emerging nations, from the performance American government at the local, state, and national levels to the interaction of peoples and states in the international arena. In short, the discipline ranges across broad and diverse areas of inquiry.

Many people think of politics in terms of what governments do, but political science also covers much else. Students will find courses on the ideas of great thinkers from Plato to the present, the problems of cities, war and peace, democratic and authoritarian political systems, international political economy, human rights, women and politics, political parties and forms of political participation that include interest groups and social movements, constitutional and international law, public policies such as immigration, the domestic and foreign policies of the United States and other countries, and the political systems of various regions around the world including the Middle East, Latin America, Africa, and Asia.

What can I do with my degree in Political Science?
Some political science majors choose to enter public service upon completing their bachelor’s degree, working for government agencies or nonprofit organizations. Other popular careers have included teaching, business, and journalism. Still other graduates enter politics. Many pursue law school – more political science majors attend law school than majors from any other department at the college – or some other kind of graduate training. Graduates have earned advanced degrees in international affairs, public policy, public administration, journalism, social work, and other fields. In sum, political science prepares students for a variety of career opportunities as well as for a lifetime of active citizenship.

Requirements
Simple Requisites
Minor Requirements - Overall
Type
Completion Requirement

1418 / 2051
Minor Requirements - Required Courses

A. IR Theories and Approaches

Complete at least 1 of the following courses:
- ECO20000 - Principles of Microeconomics
- ECO20100 - Principles of Macroeconomics
- GEOG24000 - Political Geography
- POLSC11500 - Introduction to International Relations
- POLSC27000 - International Relations: Conceptual Foundations and Current Issues
- POLSC37700 - Theories of International Politics

These courses teach students the skills necessary to think and write clearly about IR.

B. Foreign Policy and Analysis

Complete at least 1 of the following courses:
- POLSC20600 - Research Design in Political Science
- POLSC27600 - Global Issues
- POLSC27400 - American Foreign Policy
- POLSC37800 - Russia in a Globalized World
- ECO22100 - Economic Statistics
- POLSC27100 - International Politics in the Americas
- HIST34115 - Human Rights/Basic Needs A

These courses introduce students to judicial opinions as well as normative theories about the way law should be interpreted.

C. International Norms and Institutions

Complete at least 1 of the following courses:
- POLSC27800 - International Organizations
- POLSC28100 - Drugs, Politics, and Public Policy
- POLSC37400 - Russia in a Globalized World
- POLSC37500 - International Law
- POLSC38300 - Rising Powers, China, the U.S. and World Order
- GEOG37000 - Geography of Sustainable Development in Developing Countries
- PGEOG36100 - Global Climatic Change

These courses teach students how global cooperation has been achieved through the creation of international law, international norms, and international institutions.

D. International Political Economy

Complete at least 1 of the following courses:
- POLSC27500 - Politics of the Global Economy
- GEOG37000 - Geography of Sustainable Development in Developing Countries
- ECO33000 - Economic Development
- ECO34000 - International Trade
- ECO34100 - International Finance
- SOC36100 - Development and Globalization
- POLSC38600 - Politics of Finance
- SOC39700 - Migration
- SOC3100 - Population Dynamics

These courses emphasize international trade, finance, and development.

E. International Peace and Security

Complete at least 1 of the following courses:
- POLSC11000 - American Government: A Historical Introduction
- PHIL10600 - Philosophy, Politics, and Society
- PHIL25200 - Problems of Law and Morality
- POLSC34000 - Constitutional Law: Organizing the Government
- POLSC34100 - Constitutional Law: Civil Rights and Liberties
- POLSC34200 - Constitutional Law: The First Amendment

These courses emphasize the "law on the ground." They tend to present a more external analysis of the role and operation of legal institutions, actors, and norms.

Legal Institutions and Legal Processes

Complete at least 1 of the following courses:
- BUS23000 - Essentials of Business Law
- ACC28000 - Business Law I
- HIST36400 - American Constitutional History 1783 to 1900
- MEDIA36500 - Digital Copyright
- ASIAN39002 - Asian American Civil Rights and the Law
- HEBR29500 - Ancient Hebraic Law
- PHILO17000 - Introduction to Logic and Scientific Method
- PHILO34600 - Contemporary Theories of Justice
- POLSC34100 - Constitutional Law: Organizing the Government
- POLSC34400 - Constitutional Law: Civil Rights and Liberties
- POLSC34500 - Constitutional Law: The First Amendment

These courses emphasize the "law on the books," the way relative insiders, like legal theorists and judges, talk about the content of law. Courses in this category introduce students to judicial opinions as well as normative theories about the way law should be interpreted.

Additional Comments:
- Students are required to complete at least one course from within each of the three categories above.
- Students can take no more than three courses from one department.
- No more than two courses from the student's major can be applied toward the IR minor.
- Students used to fulfill the Legal Studies minor may be used to meet any other degree requirements, including the political science major.
- Students should be aware that courses listed for this minor may have prerequisites within their home departments.
Complete at least 1 of the following courses:

- POLSC28200 - International Security
- POLSC28300 - Terrorism
- POLSC37900 - War and Strategy
- POLSC38000 - European Security
- POLSC38200 - Causes of War
- POLSC38500 - The Nuclear Age: Nuclear Weapons, War and Peace

These courses focus on peace, security, conflict, violence, war, and terrorism.

Additional Comments:
Students are required to complete at least one course from Group A and at least one course from two of the other four categories (Groups B-E).
Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
- Flexible Core Scientific World

Some courses in this categories carry more than 3 credits (the "STEM variant" courses). Students who elect to take these courses may apply only three credits towards fulfilling the Common Core.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
- Flexible Core Creative Expression

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
- Flexible Core U.S. Experience in Its Diversity

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
- Flexible Core World Cultures and Global Issues

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
- Flexible Core Individual and Society Social Science

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
- Flexible Core Individual and Society Humanities

Additional Comments:
Students may take no more than two courses from one department or program to fulfill categories Common Core.

Transfer Students:
- Transfer students who have earned an AA/AS degree from an accredited institution, including CUNY, and who matriculated in fall 2013 and after will have fulfilled the Common Core.
- For all other CUNY transfer students, any unmet Common Core requirements must be completed while matriculated at Hunter.
- Non-CUNY transfer students without an AA/AS degree should confer with their adviser to determine whether they have met CCC requirements.

2nd Degree Students:
- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Degree Requirements - College Option/Hunter Focus

Type:
Completion Requirement

Earn at least 12 credits
The Hunter Focus consists of 12 credits total. The composition of these credits will vary depending on the student’s matriculation status and language proficiency. All students are required to complete the Foreign Language requirement; after that is met, students begin Concentrated Study.

Exceptions:
- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three "STEM variant" science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language
Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study
Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.
For students who matriculated prior to fall 2019, these three credits are waived.

* For students who matriculated in fall 2019 or after, and who do not also complete a second major, minor, or certificate program, these three credits shall be from a course, at the 200-level or above, on a topic related to the language used for the Foreign Language requirement, in the target language or in English translation.

Transfer Students

All transfer students must complete the Hunter Focus. For students who first matriculated in an associate program, the number of credits required in the Hunter Focus varies with the number of credits transferred.

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any “College Option” credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.

2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Additional Comments:

Degree Requirements - Pluralism and Diversity

Type

Completion Requirement

Fulfill ALL of the following requirements:

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group A

  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America or those indigenous to the Americas.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group B

  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, immigrant experiences and/or intellectual traditions of one or more of the following groups in the United States of America: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans and Native Americans.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group C

  A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, immigrant experiences and/or intellectual traditions of one or more of the following groups in the United States of America: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans and Native Americans.
A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation.

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group D

A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of Europe, including the ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Additional Comments:
Students must complete four courses designated for the Pluralism and Diversity Requirement, one from each of four categories. The four categories of Pluralism and Diversity focus on major practical or theoretical issues that emerge from, are reflected in, or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, and/or intellectual traditions of the following:

A. Non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America, or those indigenous to the Americas;
B. One or more of the following groups in the US: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, and Native Americans;
C. Women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation;
D. Europe, including ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Any one course with a Pluralism and Diversity designation can satisfy only one Pluralism and Diversity category but may also fulfill any other requirement.

Transfer Students
Transfer students must take at least two courses designated for different categories of the Pluralism and Diversity requirement. The number of courses required in Pluralism and Diversity is determined by the number of credits transferred.

Special Topics: African American Political Thought

Department(s)

Political Science

Description

This course explores the intellectual history of African American political thought through an examination of responses to classic questions of political theory such as the role of the state, human nature and its (im-)perfectibility, positive law, and normative thought. These questions are posited within a framework that Michael Dawson calls “black political ideologies.” These ideologies take shape in confrontation and negotiation with the question of black identity around the location of race, class, gender, and sexuality. It also examines the relationship of African Americans to the conception of citizenship within American political thought, and how the liberal and republican traditions coexist with ascriptive hierarchies that unveil questions of oppression and hierarchy within the nature of American society. Readings traverse the ideologies of liberalism, feminism, nationalism, Black Power, and Marxism. This course is structured both thematically and historically.

Politics and Literature

Course Title: Politics and Literature
Department(s): Political Science
Description: This course examines competing answers to a set of core questions: to what extent are humans a part of nature? How should humans interact with their environments? In what ways are environmental issues always already political ones? The course will examine these questions through a number of different intellectual traditions and conceptual approaches, with special attention to the intersections of race, class, gender, and colonialism in each. In particular, the course will center the work of feminist and indigenous scholars as we deal with the environmental issues that arise in the context of Western liberal democracy, the Anthropocene, and global climate change.

Social Democracy and Democratic Socialism

Course Title: Social Democracy and Democratic Socialism
Department(s): Political Science
Description: This course examines competing answers to a set of core questions: to what extent are humans a part of nature? How should humans interact with their environments? In what ways are environmental issues always already political ones? The course will examine these questions through a number of different intellectual traditions and conceptual approaches, with special attention to the intersections of race, class, gender, and colonialism in each. In particular, the course will center the work of feminist and indigenous scholars as we deal with the environmental issues that arise in the context of Western liberal democracy, the Anthropocene, and global climate change.
Academic Career: Undergraduate

Course 1: Public Opinion and Political Participation

- Department(s): Political Science
- Description: What American people think about politics and how they express it, from polls to elections to demonstrations.
- Academic Career: Undergraduate
- Permission Type: No Special Consent Required
- Credits:
  - Minimum Units: 3
  - Maximum Units: 3

Course 2: Democracy and the Media

- Department(s): Political Science
- Description: Democracy requires free and independent media to inform citizens, hold officials accountable, and encourage party competition on public policy. This course examines how well U.S. news organizations do so. It also analyzes how media influence public opinion through agenda setting and framing, identifies sources of media bias (such as organizational routines, private ownership, reliance on official sources, sexism, racism, and partisanship), and assesses how the rise of social media, digital technologies, and disinformation campaigns have affected these patterns.

The Supreme Court: Bad Opinions and Great Dissents
Department(s)
Political Science
Description
This is a course in American Constitutional Law but one with a twist. Courses in this area typically involve reading the majority opinions of the US Supreme Court. Instead, my class will concentrate on dissenting opinions. Most dissents have little influence and are soon forgotten. But some have been very important in changing the direction of the Court and have overturned past precedents. It is these dissents that we will read and which will provide the basis of the work in the course. The dissenting opinions will cover a variety of constitutional subjects: slavery, racial segregation, freedom of religion and speech, the rights of the criminally accused, and economic and social regulation by the state and federal governments.

Globalization and Opposition Movements

Department(s)

Political Science

Description

This course assesses the effects of economic globalization in a wide range of areas in both industrialized and non-industrialized countries. Areas may include global warming, deforestation, North-South inequality, hunger and poverty, environmental degradation, the erosion of social capital, the spread of consumer culture, population growth, global resource limits, workers' and women's rights, and immigration. Positive and negative effects of globalization are assessed, including those on the natural environment, social equality, economic security, and the quality of life. Introduces radical, reformist, and neo-liberal perspectives on these problems. Analyzes the causes and consequences of movements that arise in opposition to globalization and its effects.

Globalization and Cities
Department(s)
Political Science
Description
This course will introduce students to the study of the cultural and political production of cities through a series of compelling case studies. The Euro- American greats will be introduced in the first part of the course so that we may establish an understanding of what are considered as developed or first world cities. Quite intentionally, the course will then shift to pursue a discovery of the cities of the developing world or third world. This critique will focus not only on the city itself but also the very dichotomy between developed and developing cities, all in the intention of destabilizing the distinction between first and third worlds.

Race and Human Rights
Department(s)
Political Science
Description
Race and Human Rights examines the extent to which international human rights law, including political, civil, economic, social, and cultural rights, can be used to improve the lives of people of color. While the course primarily focuses on minority groups in the US, we will also look at the situation of Blacks in South Africa and Brazil.

The Politics of International Human Rights Enforcement
Department(s)
Political Science
Description
A focus on the political dimensions of international efforts to ensure accountability for human rights violations. We will examine both highly visible institutions (such as the International Criminal Court and the UN Human Rights Council) and those with a lower profile (such as the World Bank’s accountability compliance office). The changing ways in which state and non-state actors engage with this array of institutions will be a particular focus. Throughout the semester, students will be responsible for identifying specific country cases with respect to each accountability mechanism, and reporting back to the class — orally and in writing — on the facts, processes, outcomes, and lessons of the cases they have studied.

Course Title
Democratic Peace Theory
Department(s)
Political Science
Description
The Democratic Peace (hereafter DP), or the absence of wars between democracies, is one of the more significant findings to have emerged within International Relations scholarship in recent decades. It has consequently attracted significant and critical attention of a large body of scholars and policy-makers alike. In this course we will examine the history of the idea, its main empirical claims, the explanations for it, the auxiliary claims and the criticisms of the research. While the methodological slant will be on quantitative research, we will also examine issues of research design as well as historical case studies as appropriate. Issue areas that will be covered includes: the Kantian origins of the DP, the dyadic level of analysis, the normative, institutional, and informational explanations of the DP (three sessions), the capitalist peace, the DP as a research program, auxiliary relationships of DP (democracy in war, in covert action and in human rights), criticisms of the DP as well as the challenge of democratization.

Global Challenges
Department(s)
Political Science
Description
Global policy challenges for the U.S. and the world abound and are not difficult to recognize. However, what ideas and strategies can be identified to help alleviate such critical issues? What resources, mechanisms and actors (e.g., states, international institutions, public and private organizations) are available and what incentives motivate or discourage different forms of action? What are the known costs and constraints, and to what extent can tradeoffs and unintended consequences be managed? This course uses international relations concepts and theories to explain how global policy challenges are addressed and the factors that promote or impede international cooperation. Students will explore various international relations approaches to how the world works and their different perspectives on the ways and extent to which global policy challenges can be resolved. Students will also research and write a paper on a global policy challenge of their choice.

Politics of the Global Economy

- Introduction to International Political Economy (IPE). Examines the dynamic interaction between politics and economics across national borders, including the politics of trade, development, finance, varieties of capitalism, globalization and environmental protection. This course provides an introduction to the subfield of International Political Economy. It is designed to impart basic knowledge about the substantive issues and the main theoretical and methodological approaches in the subfield, as well as improve students' verbal, analytical and writing skills. Through examination of both historical and contemporary cases, it highlights the economic and political implications of an increasingly global economy.

America and the Rise of Isis
Department(s)
Political Science
Description
This class examines the sweep of twentieth-century American policy in the Middle East, then focuses on the politics and history after the Cold War and how it has affected the rise and potency of the Islamic State. The bulk of the course addresses issues surrounding the U.S. wars in Iraq from 1990 to 2011, the American approach to Syria, and the tangle of international and non-state actors in the region since the fall of Saddam Hussein. We seek to understand the potential and the limits of U.S. actions, and Western influence in general, in the region.

Special Topics: Religion and the Constitution
Department(s)
Political Science
Description
This course examines the First Amendment's Establishment and Free Exercise Clauses. The two Religion Clauses continue to be a focus of controversy in the legal and political arenas. The course will examine Supreme Court opinions interpreting the Religion Clauses. Topics arising under the Establishment Clause include prayer in public school classrooms, religious symbols on public property, and government funding of parochial school education. Topics arising under the Free Exercise Clause as well as statutory analogs for freedom of religion such as the Religious Freedom Restoration Act include the rights of members of a religion to be exempt from compulsory education laws and the rights of religious objectors to be excused from legal requirements such as compliance with the Affordable Care Act and anti-discrimination laws.

Special Topics: Social Welfare Politics in the US
Department(s)
Political Science
Description
This course provides an introduction to core concepts, theories, and debates in social policy, with a focus on the origins and development of US social policies up to today. In doing so, students will gain tools to critically analyze emerging policy responses to multiple crises of the current pandemic, climate change, and contemporary racialized, gendered, capitalism. We will use historical comparative perspectives to highlight distinctive aspects of the US welfare state/system, including its heavy market orientation to addressing human need and life course risks. We will also use critical race and intersectional feminist theories to illuminate how social policies shape, and are shaped by, ideologies of domination, power relations, and institutional inequalities. Readings and interactive class discussions will guide students to connect theoretical frameworks to empirical research and concrete case studies drawn from different policy areas. Throughout the course, we will pay close attention to the interrelations between economic, social, and political change, welfare state restructuring, rising inequality, and the growth of extreme poverty over recent decades in the US. Throughout the semester we will consider future alternatives for US social policy and how students might construct transformative policies informed by social justice and anti-racist principles and practices.

Course Title
Political Interpretation on Meaning and Power

Department(s)
Political Science

Description
What does knowledge consist of in the realm of politics? How is it discovered, interpreted, and produced? Is knowledge in politics radically unlike knowledge in other areas of life? Does it exist at all, especially if the public realm is warped by powerful news makers and profit-seeking information technologies? This course focuses on how we seek knowledge about the political world through interpretation, and how its meanings are importantly shaped, or distorted, by power. Ancient and modern texts (from Plato to Nietzsche, Weber, Popper, Arendt, Foucault, and feminism) will set the context, after which we turn to questions how political power inflects social knowledge today -- how we understand and acquire it, and how we use it to differentiate truth from falsehood in public life.

Democracy and Development in a Globalizing World
Department(s)
Political Science
Description
The course examines the relationship between democracy and development in post-colonial countries. Questions include: What relations of causality, in either direction, have political scientists sought to establish between democracy and development? What is the impact of globalization on these relations? How can historical analysis help to illuminate these and other issues, such as why some countries have been better at promoting per capita income growth than others? What efforts have been undertaken by individual citizens, by civic groups, by aid donors to plug the democratic deficits that arise in the course of pursuing development under 21st Century conditions?

Power, Capitalism, and Difference: Critical International Relations
Department(s)
Political Science
Description
This course approaches central themes of International Relations through a critical lens. Critical analyses involve exposing structures - underlying forces - that organize political, social, and economic life. Scaled to the level of international relations, critical perspectives highlight important influences on world order; on the persistence of nation-states; international conflict; the administration of aid; and the expansiveness of capitalism as a political-economic system. In combination, these forces shape contemporary life, and decisions about life, across a global political landscape. In other words, the course explores structured relations of power and economy, often resulting in domination and exploitation, and how such political configurations create (and limit) efforts to change the exercise of power on the global scale. The course navigates these themes through a series of units, each building upon the last: 1) Power & Globalization; 2) Capitalist Political Economy; 3) Post-Colonial World(s); 4) Race, Gender, and Difference; 5) The Politics of Development; 6) Emergency; and 7) Climate Change.

Global Power Shifts: Rising Powers, The United States and World Order

This seminar will be grounded in theoretical debates about the implications of power shifts for international stability and the character of world orders. We will also consider lessons from historical cases but our principal empirical focus will be on the current challenge to the US-led order from emerging powers, particularly China.

Psychology Department

Overview
Psychology is concerned with all aspects of the study of behavioral, developmental and cognitive processes, and employs a broad spectrum of approaches, from the social to the biological to understand them. The Hunter College Psychology program reflects the diversity of psychology as a science and as a profession. Its course offerings span this spectrum from clinical, social and developmental psychology to experimental psychology, ethology, biopsychology and behavioral neuroscience. Although Psychology is a large department, students have personal contact with faculty members through an extensive advisement system, involvement in departmental activities and committees, supervised field placement and participation in research laboratories under the guidance of faculty mentors as part of our independent study, honors, BP-ENDURE, MARC (Minority Access to Research Careers) & MBS/RISE (Minority Biomedical Research Support/Research Initiative for Scientific Enhancement) programs. A broad range of applied and research opportunities are available within the department in developmental psychology, social psychology, human adjustment, animal behavior, physiological psychology and abnormal psychology. Departmental affiliations with mental health and community organizations make it possible for students to integrate their academic studies of personality, abnormal and child psychology with supervised practical experience by means of field placements and opportunities for applied research. The faculty and facilities of various subprograms within the CUNY Psychology doctoral program and our master’s program in General Psychology and in Animal Behavior and Conservation are integral parts of the Hunter College Psychology program. These programs provide course concentrations in a number of different areas within psychology and offer undergraduate students research and other opportunities to interact with graduate students. Qualified students in their last semester may be admitted to graduate courses with the approval of the instructor and the department’s graduate adviser.

What can I do with my degree in Psychology?
The Psychology major, as part of the bachelor's degree program, prepares the student for many career possibilities in psychology, education, social and welfare services, health services and industry and fulfills the course requirements for entering most psychology graduate programs. A background in psychology combined with special training in other disciplines within the college may be especially useful in preparing for careers in human resources, medicine, law, nursing, speech pathology, social work, special education, counseling and music, art and dance therapy.

Additional Comments:
Students may take no more than two courses from one department or program to fulfill categories Common Core.

Transfer Students
- Transfer students who have earned an AA/AS degree from an accredited institution, including CUNY, and who matriculated in fall 2013 and after will have fulfilled the Common Core.
- For all other CUNY transfer students, any unmet Common Core requirements must be completed while matriculated at Hunter.
- Non-CUNY transfer students without an AA/AS degree should confer with their adviser to determine whether they have met CCC requirements.

2nd Degree Students
- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Exceptions:
- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three "STEM variant" science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12
Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Intermediate level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the Hunter Focus. Intensive courses can be used to satisfy the two-course sequence at the Elementary and at the Intermediate levels.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.

*For students who matriculated prior to fall 2019, these three credits are waived.

*For students who matriculated in fall 2019 or after, and who do not also complete a second major, minor, or certificate program, these three credits shall be from a course, at the 200-level or above, on a topic related to the language used for the Foreign Language requirement, in the target language or in English translation.

Transfer Students

All transfer students must complete the Hunter Focus. For students who first matriculated in an associate program, the number of credits required in the Hunter Focus varies with the number of credits transferred.

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Students who first matriculate in a baccalaureate program must complete 12 credits of Hunter Focus. Any “College Option” credits completed at another CUNY senior college will be applied to the Hunter Focus.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language

Transfer students must reach or work toward fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. The number of credits needed to complete the Foreign Language requirement is determined by the student’s transfer status, as defined above, and language proficiency at the time of matriculation. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser.

Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once transfer students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study as described above.

2nd Degree Students

- Students who have earned a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution are exempt from the General Education requirements.

Additional Comments:

Degree Requirements - Pluralism and Diversity

Type: Completion Requirement

Fulfill ALL of the following requirements:

- Earn at least 3 credits from the following:
  - Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group A
  - Course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues
A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America or those indigenous to the Americas.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group B

A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, immigrant experiences and/or intellectual traditions of one or more of the following groups in the United States of America: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans and Native Americans.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

- Pluralism and Diversity Requirement – Group C

A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation.

Earn at least 3 credits from the following:

A course focusing on scholarship about major practical or theoretical issues (e.g., artistic, economic, geographic, literary, political, scientific or social) that emerge from, are reflected in or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives and/or intellectual traditions of Europe, including the ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Additional Comments:

Students must complete four courses designated for the Pluralism and Diversity Requirement, one from each of four categories. The four categories of Pluralism and Diversity focus on major practical or theoretical issues that emerge from, are reflected in, or are principally derived from the historical conditions, perspectives, and/or intellectual traditions of the following:

A. Non-European societies, particularly those of Africa, Asia, Latin America, or those indigenous to the Americas;

B. One or more of the following groups in the US: African Americans, Asian Americans, Latino Americans, and Native Americans;

C. Women and/or issues of gender or sexual orientation;

D. Europe, including ways in which pluralism and diversity have been addressed.

Any one course with a Pluralism and Diversity designation can only satisfy one Pluralism and Diversity category but may also fulfill any other requirement.

Transfer Students

Transfer students must take at least two courses designated for different categories of the Pluralism and Diversity requirement. The number of courses required in Pluralism and Diversity is determined by the number of credits transferred.

- PSYCH18000 - Brain and Behavior
- PSYCH19000 - Development of Gender Roles
In order to continue in the major, students must complete the Introductory courses in psychology as listed above with a minimum grade of B and a required mathematics course with a minimum grade of C and have a minimum GPA of 2.00. The mathematics requirement may be satisfied by STAT 11300 or MATH 12400 (STEM) or by earning exemption from the mathematics requirement. Based on placement exams or transferred courses, students may place into some more advanced Mathematics and Statistics courses without taking Hunter College pre-requisites. See the Mathematics and Statistics department for details. The major must be declared in person with an Academic Adviser in Psychology. (Refer to http://hunter.cuny.edu/psychology for schedule.) The student must bring his/her Hunter transcript (and where relevant, transcripts from all other colleges attended) when meeting with the adviser to declare a psychology major.

Neuroscience
Department(s)
Psychology
Description
The aim of this course is to introduce you to the biological and physiological aspect of the science of Psychology. Biopsychology is the subarea of Psychology that takes a biological approach to understanding behavior. Biopsychologists study the biological events - genetic, neural, endocrine - that underlie each and every one of our thoughts, feelings, and actions. This course will explore what is currently known about the biological basis of emotional responses, mental illness, sexual behavior, memory, states of consciousness, sensory perception, thought and language, and several neurological disorders.

Department(s)

Psychology

Description

This is a basic neuroscience course that will first introduce the building blocks of the central nervous system namely, the structure and function of neurons, brain neuroanatomy, basic neuropharmacology and different research methods to study the brain. We will then move and explore functional aspects of the brain, e.g. the processing of sensory information, learning and memory and decision-making. We will also discuss how neural activity is transformed into behavior.

Course Title
Emotion Function and Dysfunction
Department(s)
Psychology
Description
How can it be that emotions are so important for surviving and thriving but are also at the heart of so many mental disorders? Our focus will be on understanding the role of emotion in both functional and dysfunctional contexts. Recent cognitive, social, neurobiological and theoretical advances in the area of affective sciences have important implications for our understanding of psychopathology. Readings, lecture, discussion, and in and out of roomclass exercises will be geared towards building an understanding of major psychological disorders through the lens of emotion theory and research. Since many disorders are integrally linked to core emotions such as fear and sadness, anxiety and mood disorders will receive the bulk of attention in this class.

Romance Languages Department

Overview
The Department of Romance Languages at Hunter College offers language, culture and literature courses in French, Italian, Spanish, as well as literature and culture courses in English. Our degrees include the undergraduate major and master’s degrees in French, Italian and Spanish. We also offer a Romance Languages major that combines knowledge and understanding of two Romance literatures and cultures. Besides these offerings, the department has added a major concentration in Spanish-English/English-Spanish Translation and Interpretation, an expansion of its vision of providing professional training within the context of traditional liberal arts.

What can I do with my degree in Romance Languages?
The department is committed to equipping students for professional life: it has continued Hunter’s tradition in teacher preparation. Most students majoring in one or two Romance languages pursue careers in education. Others enter careers in the fields of commerce, tourism, interpretation and translation and international affairs, among others.

Exceptions:
- Students in the School of Nursing may fulfill their entire 12 credits of Hunter Focus by taking three “STEM variant” science courses in addition to the STEM courses used to fulfill the Common Core.
- Students with a joint major in Education may fulfill their entire 12 credits with courses in Education.

Hunter Focus: Foreign Language
Students must attain fourth-semester proficiency in a foreign language. For students with no prior language courses, this proficiency typically consists of completing four courses or a total of 12 credits. Students who have prior language courses, including those from high school, should consult an adviser. Students may apply only one course at each level (Elementary level 1, Elementary level 2, Intermediate level 3, and Intermediate level 4) toward the
Hunter Focus: Concentrated Study

Once students have completed the Foreign Language requirement, any credits remaining from the 12 required for the Hunter Focus will be used on Concentrated Study. Concentrated Study refers to courses that fulfill requirements for a declared minor, a second major or a certificate. The number of credits required for Concentrated Study ranges from 0-12 and is determined by the number of credits in a foreign language a student must take.
